Air Explorers Group Formed At Institute For Cambridge Lads

Last Friday marked the initial meeting of the Air Explorers, a newly formed Cambridge boy's group. As the name implies, the primary interest of the group is aeronautical. Members of the Air Explorers are drawn from all-minded Cambridge lads between the ages of fourteen and seventeen.

When the late Donn Baker was approached last spring with the idea of forming such an organization he approved wholeheartedly and offered any assistance the Institute might give. But because the term was just about over, nothing much could be accomplished.

Assistant Dean of Students Thomas L. Hilton, also favorably approached last spring with the idea of using Institute facilities. As the name implies, the group was a tour of the Institute aeronautical. Most of this work is done by Henry H. Jex '51, Donald Reis '51, and Robert Lange, who help the scout advisor. The first activity of the group was a tour of the Institute Department of Aeronautical Engineering. Although there is some opportunity to do real flying at the summer camp, stress is placed on fundamentals for the most part.

Growing Organization

Starting with the present group of ten, the originators of the plan hope that interest will increase and that the number of Air Explorers increases. As the boys gain more and more experience, they progress through the ranks. In this manner the organization hopes to become self-perpetuating, providing Cambridge boys not only with technical instruction, but also with an opportunity to achieve leadership ability.
