War With United States Not Wished By Chinese, States Ex-Prince Consul

"Communism China's leaders do not want war with the United States—their internal problems are too immense," said Dr. John L. Rawlinson, former Viceroy in Tibet, China, in a talk before the Young Republican Club and guests. They are willing to take a role of defence which might promote war, he continued, because they know that they have the full support of the Soviet Union.

Since 1838 China has been faced with immense problems. Poor distribution of land, overpopulation, and internal unrest. The paralleling of these Internal problems, although they know that they are in the Soviet Union.

Dr. Rawlinson also pointed out that China must take the initiative in this meeting, because they know that they have the full support of the Soviet Union.

Since 1838 China has been faced with immense problems. Poor distribution of land, overpopulation, and internal unrest. The paralleling of these Internal problems, although they know that they have the full support of the Soviet Union.

Dr. Rawlinson also pointed out that China must take the initiative in this meeting, because they know that they have the full support of the Soviet Union.

Since 1838 China has been faced with immense problems. Poor distribution of land, overpopulation, and internal unrest. The paralleling of these Internal problems, although they know that they have the full support of the Soviet Union.

Dr. Rawlinson also pointed out that China must take the initiative in this meeting, because they know that they have the full support of the Soviet Union.

Since 1838 China has been faced with immense problems. Poor distribution of land, overpopulation, and internal unrest. The paralleling of these Internal problems, although they know that they have the full support of the Soviet Union.

Dr. Rawlinson also pointed out that China must take the initiative in this meeting, because they know that they have the full support of the Soviet Union.

Since 1838 China has been faced with immense problems. Poor distribution of land, overpopulation, and internal unrest. The paralleling of these Internal problems, although they know that they have the full support of the Soviet Union.

Dr. Rawlinson also pointed out that China must take the initiative in this meeting, because they know that they have the full support of the Soviet Union.