Killian Stresses Specialism Need

"We must prepare men to be skilled and creative. For his own discipline and for the nation as a whole to do as least one thing extremely well. To do many things is impossible; to do one thing faultlessly is possible."

This point was one of the primary points stressed as seen by President James H. Killian, Jr., in his address to the Committee on Education for Freedom held last Thursday.

Dr. Killian also stressed an understanding of one’s specialism and the concept of individual liberty, and growth in moral and spiritual welfare with the development of a "hierarchy of values."

Uncompellable Influences

Other speakers included Dr. J. B. Stiler, president of Colby College; Prof. J. H. Kerman of the Department of Mechanical Engineering, Moderator was Dr. Karl Deutsch of the Department of Economics of MIT.

President Killian added that education is the basis of social progress. "It is the bottom that prepares the individual to do his part in this important project."

He warned that the radio, movies, and press have "washed the bottom out of the bottom of the pyramid of the responsibility."

"Specialism appears to be the only way to meet the tremendous social problems," he said. "It must cultivate the arithmetical virtues of personal understanding and self-understanding; and the altruism."

Rockwell Cage Scene Of Sig. Corps Display

A vast exhibit of television, radio, and electronic devices and their use in modern warfare was displayed by the Sigma Corps in Building 60 last Thursday, December 5.

The exhibit showed the manner in which TV and the corps is adopted by the American public, as well as the corps use television and radio, and electric devices in special applications of units in the army.

One point of interest was a television camera and a cable chain connected with several television sets, which are used to display the news, which now on the TV screen. The news is small in size but has been made so that the soldier on the battle front can receive a connection to the Pentagon if necessary.

Training of skilled minutes by radar and long range communication is being done, and signals from the moon constituted another interesting part of the exhibit. The Institution showing was preliminary to the public display in the First Congregational Church December 16 to 19.
