We sent a questionnaire to the high school teachers of 500 students already entered here at the Institute, asking them that their answers would not be used in any way for or against the students. The answers to the questions, which dealt with whether or not the student was working a job, showed that the students would not have answered truthfully, and hence of no value. For this reason, the idea was dropped.

Why Students Pick The Institute

Work is now being done to determine why students choose the Institute as their school.
