NOTICES

Catholic Club
Rev. Theodore Peterson, C.S.P., will speak on "Evolution and Christianity," at the weekly meeting of the Catholic Club. The meeting will be held on Wednesday, October 31, at Room 3-140 at 5:00 p.m. Everyone is invited.

T.E.N. Smoker
The T.E.N. Smoker News Smoker will be held Wed., October 31, at 5 p.m. in the Moore Room, 6-71. All students interested in art, writing, makeup, advertising, etc., are invited. Refreshments will be served.

Technology Dames Hold Desert Party Benefit
The Technology Dames will hold a Desert Party Benefit in the Emma Rogers Room, at 7:30 p.m., on Friday, November 9, 1961. Coffee, Emma Rogers Room, at 7:30 p.m., will be served at that time, to be followed by an evening of bridge for those who wish to play. During the evening a drawing will be held to those who wish to play. During the evening a drawing will be held to buy a ticket. Coffee, Emma Rogers Room, at 7:30 p.m., will be served at that time, to be followed by an evening of bridge for those who wish to play. During the evening a drawing will be held to buy a ticket. Coffee, Emma Rogers Room, at 7:30 p.m., will be served at that time, to be followed by an evening of bridge for those who wish to play. During the evening a drawing will be held to buy a ticket.

SLATER APPOINTMENT
Dr. John O. Slater, Institute Professor, who was for twenty-one years head of the Department of Physics at Tech in foreign countries is an obvious choice. Dr. Slater has been appointed by the Board of Trustees and by the Faculty to a position of outstanding rank in the company of other solids. Professor Slater has made important contributions to the understanding of the properties of metals, glass and other solids. His work on the structures of metals, glass and other solids, has been of great importance to the advancement of this field.

Russell Interview
(Continued from Page 1) good, virulent, but freebie man."

RUSSELL LECTURE
(Continued from Page 1)
This love of excitement is most powerful desire. In the wilds of Australia, where people are few and rabbits are many, man may satisfy himself by killing rabbits. In London or New York, where people are many and rabbits few, other means must be found to satisfy this desire. Mr. Russell suggests the construction in New York of artificial waterfalls with very fragile canoes; anyone who speaks of a preventive war should be asked to take out his excitement by riding in the canoe.

We and the Russians
"Why do we hate the Russians?" asks Russell. Is it because they are trying to take away our liberty? We hate them so strongly, says Russell, that we have tried to eliminate them at home. The real reason for the hate, according to Russell, is fear.

"The main thing needed to make the world happy is intelligence, and that, fortunately, can be cultivated in men," said Mr. Russell in conclusion.

During the question period which followed the lecture, Mr. Russell made two sweeping statements: "There is absolutely no possible hope for mankind without widespread teaching of birth control methods," and: "I am at a loss to see any influence exerted by Christianity on the few years of world history." Room 10-304 was full, with the audience squatting on the ground. The lecture was recorded in single file along the aisles of the room and sitting on the steps leading to the upper tiers.

Russell Lecture
(Continued from Page 1)
This love of excitement is most powerful desire. In the wilds of Australia, where people are few and rabbits are many, man may satisfy himself by killing rabbits. In London or New York, where people are many and rabbits few, other means must be found to satisfy this desire. Mr. Russell suggests the construction in New York of artificial waterfalls with very fragile canoes; anyone who speaks of a preventive war should be asked to take out his excitement by riding in the canoe.

We and the Russians
"Why do we hate the Russians?" asks Russell. Is it because they are trying to take away our liberty? We hate them so strongly, says Russell, that we have tried to eliminate them at home. The real reason for the hate, according to Russell, is fear.

"The main thing needed to make the world happy is intelligence, and that, fortunately, can be cultivated in men," said Mr. Russell in conclusion.

During the question period which followed the lecture, Mr. Russell made two sweeping statements: "There is absolutely no possible hope for mankind without widespread teaching of birth control methods," and: "I am at a loss to see any influence exerted by Christianity on the few years of world history." Room 10-304 was full, with the audience squatting on the ground. The lecture was recorded in single file along the aisles of the room and sitting on the steps leading to the upper tiers.

Russell Lecture
(Continued from Page 1)
This love of excitement is most powerful desire. In the wilds of Australia, where people are few and rabbits are many, man may satisfy himself by killing rabbits. In London or New York, where people are many and rabbits few, other means must be found to satisfy this desire. Mr. Russell suggests the construction in New York of artificial waterfalls with very fragile canoes; anyone who speaks of a preventive war should be asked to take out his excitement by riding in the canoe.

We and the Russians
"Why do we hate the Russians?" asks Russell. Is it because they are trying to take away our liberty? We hate them so strongly, says Russell, that we have tried to eliminate them at home. The real reason for the hate, according to Russell, is fear.

"The main thing needed to make the world happy is intelligence, and that, fortunately, can be cultivated in men," said Mr. Russell in conclusion.

During the question period which followed the lecture, Mr. Russell made two sweeping statements: "There is absolutely no possible hope for mankind without widespread teaching of birth control methods," and: "I am at a loss to see any influence exerted by Christianity on the few years of world history." Room 10-304 was full, with the audience squatting on the ground. The lecture was recorded in single file along the aisles of the room and sitting on the steps leading to the upper tiers.

Russell Lecture
(Continued from Page 1)
This love of excitement is most powerful desire. In the wilds of Australia, where people are few and rabbits are many, man may satisfy himself by killing rabbits. In London or New York, where people are many and rabbits few, other means must be found to satisfy this desire. Mr. Russell suggests the construction in New York of artificial waterfalls with very fragile canoes; anyone who speaks of a preventive war should be asked to take out his excitement by riding in the canoe.

We and the Russians
"Why do we hate the Russians?" asks Russell. Is it because they are trying to take away our liberty? We hate them so strongly, says Russell, that we have tried to eliminate them at home. The real reason for the hate, according to Russell, is fear.

"The main thing needed to make the world happy is intelligence, and that, fortunately, can be cultivated in men," said Mr. Russell in conclusion.

During the question period which followed the lecture, Mr. Russell made two sweeping statements: "There is absolutely no possible hope for mankind without widespread teaching of birth control methods," and: "I am at a loss to see any influence exerted by Christianity on the few years of world history." Room 10-304 was full, with the audience squatting on the ground. The lecture was recorded in single file along the aisles of the room and sitting on the steps leading to the upper tiers.