Air Raid Drill on Thursday

Full participation of the Institute in the Greater Boston air raid scheduled for May 15 is in the making by the M.I.T. Civil Defense Organization. This air raid test is a community undertaking and the Institute has been asked by the Civil Defense director of Cambridge to participate fully.

Shortly after 10 a.m. next Thursday the test alarm, a three-minute warning signal, will be sounded, to be followed by an all-clear signal, three-one-minute blats, after which all persons will be required to carry out the plans and procedures formulated.

The M.I.T. Civil Defense Organization suggests that everyone be indoors during the test and that the best available shelter, those places that can be sheltered safely are the Institute building's first floor corridor, basements, storage areas, and the library.

All classes and laboratory sections will be dismissed; they will be required immediately following the all-clear signal. Staff members in charge of laboratory sections are warned to see that all laboratory animals are removed. After the all-clear signal, personnel will be required to remain in the shelter for at least 15 minutes.
