and responsibility the problems with which Institute Committees should deal, and possible changes in the structure of the Committees.

Types of Leadership

Panel E, "General Leadership Qualities," was led by Professor John Y. Bayre, Malcolm Blair, Bruce Murray, and George Stevenson. The panel discussed the subject from four standpoints: leadership required in a military situation where strict obedience to duty is required; leadership in a group of very intelligent and well-educated people—on the academic level; leadership of a group of un-intelligent men who were doing a dirty job and leadership in a volunteer group. The panel decided that a leader must respect his men and treat them as individuals, understand what the group is doing and why, be able to motivate and in-ordinate a suitable communication system between members of the group and himself, acquire the confidence of his men, create interest in the work to be done, and be able to do his fair share of the work along with the men. Following the two panels, a general meeting was held at which the panel leaders handed in reports on the discussions. At 8:00 p.m., dinner was served, followed by an address by Dr. Killian. After dinner an informal discussion, led by Matthew Mandriano, President of the Institute Committee, concerned itself with the best method by which student government can function, and recommendations for improving student government at the Institute.

Student and Administration

Sunday's half of the conference opened with breakfast at 8:00 a.m., followed by two panel discussions. Panel F, "Incorporation of Student Activities to the Administration and to the Students," was led by Mr. C. H. Esken, Jay Keough, Charles Kennedy, and Bennett Sack. The problem of relations between administration and activities was discussed, and it was decided that the biggest trouble here was with regard to communication. The question of extending facilities or allowing activities to all was brought up. The problems with regard to relations between administration and government activities were also discussed. A method of bringing Class A and Class B activities closer together was sought; suggested were conference-type meetings, and a be-
