Special Student Rates Offered For Play, "The Fourposter"

Applications Being Accepted Professor William C. Greenan, of the Department of English and History, and Miss Constance Houghton of the T.C.A., are handling applications for the privilege extended here to all special student rate holders. Applications must be made by these dates.

Mr. Greenan will hold an informal discussion after the early-curtain performance on March 17 with students interested in the play. He hopes students will fill questions to him and Miss Tandy at this time about the play, acting, directing and the theatre in general. He holds this type of informal discussion with great success in other cities.

Given Many Awards

"The play is the story of thirty-five years in the life of a married couple." "New York Daily News" review.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1955

The Tech

Student Finds British Study Devastates Much From Institute

by Martin S. Brilliant '54

The accompanying photographs of Miss Antoinette Pelry, of the American Theatre Wing, and Miss Jessica Tandy, of the American Repertory Theatre, were published in The Tech of February 1 and were since reproduced in the Boston Globe and the Boston Daily News.

The structure of an English university, and the structure of a college in the United States, are two things of which is almost independent. The structure of an English college extends so far that the processes between student and tutor, is usually unfamiliar to the graduate school with respect to the structures at M.I.T.

The tutorial system has many advantages over the American systems familiar to us. It is enabled to a student to perform, to take a course, and to demand specific assistance. It enables the student to study according to his own schedule and not to the universities. It enables him to get the work done and not to be(Make a request for the full text of this article. Please note that due to the nature of the image, not all text elements are legible.)