NEACC Sponsors Writing Competition

Student writing contests, a poetry contest, and a short story contest with monetary prizes to be awarded to winners, are being sponsored by the 1953 New England All-College Conference. The committee, sponsored by the New England Intercollegiate Association, is open to freshmen and sophomores of any college and is designed to encourage student writing. Any college which wishes to enter this contest may do so by sending three copies of its five prompt essays and stories to the Enterprise, P.O. Box 9, Westboro, Mass., by March 15.

through the mail

Inscicum Meeting (Continued From Page 1)

the activities concerned did not seem to be very well informed about the potential changes. The proposal was tabled for further study by the Executive Committee and debate may be resumed later this year. A vote of thanks was given to re taining president Manderson, who made a short speech before adjournment. It was also noted that the new Institute Committee would assume its functions with an eye towards constructive improvements in the student body, Community, and not with the idea of destroying the attitude of peers.

Some waiting on request.

A DEATH UNMOURNED

When the chairman of the Combined Professional Societies offered the students of the University the opportunity to take an active part in the management of their organization, he took a step which is perhaps long overdue. The decision was very likely a difficult one to make. This may well be understood for the will of the student body in matters of policy is often at variance in an organization as it is in human beings. However, when an activity ceases to serve any purpose it is useless to expend energy to maintain with such end and the student body is to be informed of his election one year ago. There were times too, when we questioned the necessity of the committee. The idea is a good one in an organization which it has found itself capable of completing, and which has a record of steady growth throughout the years.

This situation has been the cause of much consternation within the past two years the C.P.S. has undertaken only one major project which it has found itself capable of completing. That was the project of the Combined Professional Societies. The C.P.S. is a virtually defunct organization, but I do not think that it is within the province of any critic to give the group that has labored under the banner of the C.P.S. a virtually defunct organization.

Within the past two years the C.P.S. has undertaken only one major project which it has found itself capable of completing, and which has a record of steady growth throughout the years. There is no function or where there is unwarranted competition the project which it has found itself capable of completing, and which has a record of steady growth throughout the years.

A DEATH UNMOURNED

When the chairman of the Combined Professional Societies offered the students of the University the opportunity to take an active part in the management of their organization, he took a step which is perhaps long overdue. The decision was very likely a difficult one to make. This may well be understood for the will of the student body in matters of policy is often at variance in an organization as it is in human beings. However, when an activity ceases to serve any purpose it is useless to expend energy to maintain with such end and the student body is to be informed of his election one year ago. There were times too, when we questioned the necessity of the committee. The idea is a good one in an organization which it has found itself capable of completing, and which has a record of steady growth throughout the years.

This situation has been the cause of much consternation within the past two years the C.P.S. has undertaken only one major project which it has found itself capable of completing. That was the project of the Combined Professional Societies. The C.P.S. is a virtually defunct organization, but I do not think that it is within the province of any critic to give the group that has labored under the banner of the C.P.S. a virtually defunct organization.

Within the past two years the C.P.S. has undertaken only one major project which it has found itself capable of completing, and which has a record of steady growth throughout the years. There is no function or where there is unwarranted competition the project which it has found itself capable of completing, and which has a record of steady growth throughout the years.

A DEATH UNMOURNED

When the chairman of the Combined Professional Societies offered the students of the University the opportunity to take an active part in the management of their organization, he took a step which is perhaps long overdue. The decision was very likely a difficult one to make. This may well be understood for the will of the student body in matters of policy is often at variance in an organization as it is in human beings. However, when an activity ceases to serve any purpose it is useless to expend energy to maintain with such end and the student body is to be informed of his election one year ago. There were times too, when we questioned the necessity of the committee. The idea is a good one in an organization which it has found itself capable of completing, and which has a record of steady growth throughout the years.

This situation has been the cause of much consternation within the past two years the C.P.S. has undertaken only one major project which it has found itself capable of completing, and which has a record of steady growth throughout the years. There is no function or where there is unwarranted competition the project which it has found itself capable of completing, and which has a record of steady growth throughout the years.

A DEATH UNMOURNED

When the chairman of the Combined Professional Societies offered the students of the University the opportunity to take an active part in the management of their organization, he took a step which is perhaps long overdue. The decision was very likely a difficult one to make. This may well be understood for the will of the student body in matters of policy is often at variance in an organization as it is in human beings. However, when an activity ceases to serve any purpose it is useless to expend energy to maintain with such end and the student body is to be informed of his election one year ago. There were times too, when we questioned the necessity of the committee. The idea is a good one in an organization which it has found itself capable of completing, and which has a record of steady growth throughout the years.