BIENVENUE

It has become a matter of habit—the thing to do—for a college community to offer words of welcome to its incoming students. It is a tradition, however, to which we are very willing to conform. It is likely that members of the class of 1957 have received overwhelming evidence from other portions of the M.I.T. community that this “tradition of welcome” is being adhered to.

It is likely too that the new student may regard these welcome words as lacking in sincerity and that they are only social obligations, accepted distastefully by those offering them. This might be the case, but we think not. We like to look upon M.I.T. as an institution which prides itself in the unity and teamwork of members who share a public responsibility and whose congratulations are earnest because they know from experience that there is much to learn. This recognition of student responsibility and initiative which has sometimes been called upon to remind the administration of its duties is an attribute of M.I.T. which helps to make it stand out in the many extra-curricular activities. Too often in the past freshmen have been called upon to remind the administration of its duties. They are the key to passing. Lab work is usually mastered by the end of the second term.

A passing grade. It won't. The ability to write legibly and under time pressure is a few of the angles which are featured attraction of this course.
