East Campus House Commends Lubell Dispute, Seeks Profits On Vending Machines

The much-discussed lounge chairman controversy is over. At its meeting last Wednesday night, the East Campus House Committee decided to accept the recommendation of its Lounge Chairman, Martin S. Lubell '54. This ended a situation that threatened to become a source of concern for all East Campus residents.

Vending machines in general and milk-vending machines in particular were the topics of several other committee resolutions. One resolution noted the administration's cigarette and candy dispensing machines on East Campus to the East Campus House Committee. The resolution asked for the installation of a machine to vend milk in one quart cartons at a cost of 50c a quart, with the stipulation that all profits go to the house committee, regardless of whether or not house commit-tee members are using the product from the other machines.

The committee also expressed itself on the recent proposal to cut swimming pool hours. A resolution was named stating that the East Campus House Committee is in favor of keeping the Alumni Pool open on weekends and until 9:00 p.m. in the cre-ating a better environment that will entice more people to go swimming Sunday hours for the pool before the recent decision to cut the hours.

The Social Chairman, in his report, recommended that a dance be held in the Burton House commo-ns room and Sunday at Harvard.

Burton Lounge, East Campus
Renamed Talbot

Alfred E. Burton Lounge on East Campus will be renamed the Dr. Alfred E. Burton Lounge by the administration tomorrow morning. The occasion was announced by Dr. Henry T. Taft, who was a doctor for many years and many students have been injured in the area.

The question of renaming the lounge was first brought up by a student who was concerned about the safety of the area. The East Campus House Committee approved the resolution but the Burton House committee, which gave the lounge its name, did not agree. The name Alfred E. Burton is expected to be used for the lounge.

Baker Memorial Foundation To Finance Religious Project

By Daniel Schneider '57

At a recent meeting of the Everett Moore Baker Memorial Foundation, it was announced that the foundation has decided to finance T.C.A.'s new religious emphasis program.

It was also revealed that the Foundation would like to spend its principal funds on a religious library to be placed in the new chapel. It is hoped that many of the books in this library will be the personal collection.

An initial donation of $900 of cur-rent funds and $2,500 of endowment funds was made to the foundation by Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Baker '54, chairman of the foundation committee. The gift is in line with the purpose of the foundation—to perpetuate the memory of Dr. Baker and his great contributions to M.I.T.

T.C.A. Discusses Reorganization Of Boy's Work

Last Wednesday night, a meeting was held between representatives of T.C.A. and its Harvard counterpart, the Harvard Educational Leadership Committee (HELC). The purpose of this conference was to explore the feasibility of the Boy's Work project on a larger scale.

Reorganization Possible

According to a letter from Charles R. Boylan, T.C.A. vice-president in charge of the Boy's Work, a reorganization of the department is being considered, initially involving some sort of coordination with T.C.A. and its Harvard counterpart. This would involve a joint meeting of both organizations, and the question of setting up a joint committee on the topic to be discussed. In addition, a general meeting of all the service units of all the colleges in the Boston area.

Field Day was the principle topic of discussion at the meeting of Institute Committee on Wednesday, December 2. The Field Day Evaluation Committee presented a preliminary report on the meeting at the next meeting of the Committee. The committee's final report will be made at the Immacom next meeting.

The committee suggested some ideas for the improvement of the annual rivalry. It was agreed by the committee that Field Day was good and should be continued, but that further innovations, such as an additional prize, might improve the event.

It was suggested that a large tug-boat be held between the freshmen and sophomores classes approximately one week before Field Day itself. The class which won this match would be awarded the Purple Shirts, and would have to wear them from the other class for that week. This class would have the start at the start of Field Day. This would be a certain number of students on the field each night, with a series of races, which history and such other events of form-um “hazing,” previously prohibited under the Institute's Constitution, euphonic in a recent referendum, re- ceived a favorable vote. The总的来说, the concen-trating on the main point, which is the social aspect, is still permissible, but the rules, such as the wearing of ties and the having of student cards, were modified by the committee.

The committee discussed these recommendations and in turn offered suggestions to the Field Day Committee.

Other business taken up in the meeting included a decision to form a law-syllabus committee for the Law School, a new two-man panel, consisting of Oliver D. Johns '56, Willard G. Phelps '56, and Nelson J. Jones '56, was appointed to publish the coming Christmas Program at the Institute.
