The candidates: records, opinions, and views

An analysis based on interviews by the features staff

Friday, February 19, 1970

The tech

The candidates: records, opinions, and views

Gerald Perloff

Gerald Perloff '70, the most recent candidate to enter the contest for the presidency of the Undergraduate Association, is beating his campaign on the premise that "such living units should be consistent with the maximum good for all members." He believes that the Institute should move towards a collegiate style of living.

Perloff does not think that restriction of "fraternity-ocracy" is a viable solution, but has not named any alternatives. He attributes his lack of support to the fact that he has been out of the country for a year.

Eldon H. Reiley

Eldon Reiley '70, candidate for president of the Undergraduate Association, is placing the major emphasis on the need for the Institute to develop a closer relationship with the students. He feels that the news-gathering functions should be taken over by WMIT, but does not see this as a replacement for the "risk of becoming a watchdog." He does not believe in the "open house" concept, but feels that the administration should be more cooperative in allowing students to observe the actions of their peers.

The major trouble, as Reiley sees it, is the lack of facilities for communication, while the lack of coordination, he believes, is basing his campaign on the Institute Committee and the undergraduate president, "not the lack of facilities for communication." He believes that the administration is "willing to" a great deal to do with the "reluctance on the part of these fraternities." He sees no real solution to the problem, and believes that the "best solution" is to have DormComm conduct a poll on the issue, and use this as the basis for enforcement.

He believes that the "place of Institute policy towards the fraternities" is to have DormComm conduct a poll on the issue, and use this as the basis for enforcement.

Gerald Perloff

Gerald Perloff '70, the most recent candidate to enter the contest for the presidency of the Undergraduate Association, is beating his campaign on the premise that "such living units should be consistent with the maximum good for all members." He believes that the Institute should move towards a collegiate style of living.

Perloff does not think that restriction of "fraternity-ocracy" is a viable solution, but has not named any alternatives. He attributes his lack of support to the fact that he has been out of the country for a year.

Eldon H. Reiley

Eldon Reiley '70, candidate for president of the Undergraduate Association, is placing the major emphasis on the need for the Institute to develop a closer relationship with the students. He feels that the news-gathering functions should be taken over by WMIT, but does not see this as a replacement for the "risk of becoming a watchdog." He does not believe in the "open house" concept, but feels that the administration should be more cooperative in allowing students to observe the actions of their peers.

The major trouble, as Reiley sees it, is the lack of facilities for communication, while the lack of coordination, he believes, is basing his campaign on the Institute Committee and the undergraduate president, "not the lack of facilities for communication." He believes that the administration is "willing to" a great deal to do with the "reluctance on the part of these fraternities." He sees no real solution to the problem, and believes that the "best solution" is to have DormComm conduct a poll on the issue, and use this as the basis for enforcement.

He believes that the "place of Institute policy towards the fraternities" is to have DormComm conduct a poll on the issue, and use this as the basis for enforcement.

Gerald Perloff

Gerald Perloff '70, the most recent candidate to enter the contest for the presidency of the Undergraduate Association, is beating his campaign on the premise that "such living units should be consistent with the maximum good for all members." He believes that the Institute should move towards a collegiate style of living.

Perloff does not think that restriction of "fraternity-ocracy" is a viable solution, but has not named any alternatives. He attributes his lack of support to the fact that he has been out of the country for a year.

Eldon H. Reiley

Eldon Reiley '70, candidate for president of the Undergraduate Association, is placing the major emphasis on the need for the Institute to develop a closer relationship with the students. He feels that the news-gathering functions should be taken over by WMIT, but does not see this as a replacement for the "risk of becoming a watchdog." He does not believe in the "open house" concept, but feels that the administration should be more cooperative in allowing students to observe the actions of their peers.

The major trouble, as Reiley sees it, is the lack of facilities for communication, while the lack of coordination, he believes, is basing his campaign on the Institute Committee and the undergraduate president, "not the lack of facilities for communication." He believes that the administration is "willing to" a great deal to do with the "reluctance on the part of these fraternities." He sees no real solution to the problem, and believes that the "best solution" is to have DormComm conduct a poll on the issue, and use this as the basis for enforcement.

He believes that the "place of Institute policy towards the fraternities" is to have DormComm conduct a poll on the issue, and use this as the basis for enforcement.

Gerald Perloff

Gerald Perloff '70, the most recent candidate to enter the contest for the presidency of the Undergraduate Association, is beating his campaign on the premise that "such living units should be consistent with the maximum good for all members." He believes that the Institute should move towards a collegiate style of living.

Perloff does not think that restriction of "fraternity-ocracy" is a viable solution, but has not named any alternatives. He attributes his lack of support to the fact that he has been out of the country for a year.

Eldon H. Reiley

Eldon Reiley '70, candidate for president of the Undergraduate Association, is placing the major emphasis on the need for the Institute to develop a closer relationship with the students. He feels that the news-gathering functions should be taken over by WMIT, but does not see this as a replacement for the "risk of becoming a watchdog." He does not believe in the "open house" concept, but feels that the administration should be more cooperative in allowing students to observe the actions of their peers.

The major trouble, as Reiley sees it, is the lack of facilities for communication, while the lack of coordination, he believes, is basing his campaign on the Institute Committee and the undergraduate president, "not the lack of facilities for communication." He believes that the administration is "willing to" a great deal to do with the "reluctance on the part of these fraternities." He sees no real solution to the problem, and believes that the "best solution" is to have DormComm conduct a poll on the issue, and use this as the basis for enforcement.

He believes that the "place of Institute policy towards the fraternities" is to have DormComm conduct a poll on the issue, and use this as the basis for enforcement.

Gerald Perloff

Gerald Perloff '70, the most recent candidate to enter the contest for the presidency of the Undergraduate Association, is beating his campaign on the premise that "such living units should be consistent with the maximum good for all members." He believes that the Institute should move towards a collegiate style of living.

Perloff does not think that restriction of "fraternity-ocracy" is a viable solution, but has not named any alternatives. He attributes his lack of support to the fact that he has been out of the country for a year.

Eldon H. Reiley

Eldon Reiley '70, candidate for president of the Undergraduate Association, is placing the major emphasis on the need for the Institute to develop a closer relationship with the students. He feels that the news-gathering functions should be taken over by WMIT, but does not see this as a replacement for the "risk of becoming a watchdog." He does not believe in the "open house" concept, but feels that the administration should be more cooperative in allowing students to observe the actions of their peers.

The major trouble, as Reiley sees it, is the lack of facilities for communication, while the lack of coordination, he believes, is basing his campaign on the Institute Committee and the undergraduate president, "not the lack of facilities for communication." He believes that the administration is "willing to" a great deal to do with the "reluctance on the part of these fraternities." He sees no real solution to the problem, and believes that the "best solution" is to have DormComm conduct a poll on the issue, and use this as the basis for enforcement.

He believes that the "place of Institute policy towards the fraternities" is to have DormComm conduct a poll on the issue, and use this as the basis for enforcement.