Establishing a new musical medium, the concert band is creatively fulfilling a new type of audience and exclusively, the concert band is creating a new outfit. The outfit hasn't been scouring the music publishing houses of the nation long, but in his search, he has found a few compositions that seem to be heard in performances later in the year.

Under the leadership of its president, Randy Robinson, the band is not the first of its kind at Tech, but it is dedicated, and is now known as the band's "fabulous technical outfit," which is always kept in shape by regular practice.

While working for a degree in public relations at Boston University, Mr. Corley went to a number of concert band performances. His name has been mentioned in the Boston Symphony, and he has been accepted into the finest groups around.

When World War II broke out, the group claimed its services, and upon his graduation from the army, he entered to begin the journey of band director in the history of the United States Army. After leading a group in Ireland, he returned to Boston to enter the field for which he had been trained, and is now Director of Bands in the Brookline schools.

Leading an ensemble which would play only original band music has always been a dream of Mr. Corley's. He has put forth great effort to see this dream realized, and is only beginning to reap the fruits of success.

The brass choir which many heard at the recent convocation is a part of this group as a "fabulous technical outfit," which is always kept in shape by regular practice.

The brass choir which many heard at the recent convocation is a part of this group as a "fabulous technical outfit," which is always kept in shape by regular practice.

Some of the early plans for the band included the following:

Under his supervision the Officers of the band planned numerous concerts this year, the first of which will be held at the summer home of the Boston Symphony. He has been acclaimed as the band's present conductor, Mr. John Corley.

"I..." is Toasted to taste better!

What makes a Lucky taste better?

Dubiously, you've guessed that the Doodle at the right is: Cigarettes two-gun cowboys enjoying better-tasting Lucky while waiting in ambush. Lots of other two-gun cowboys—and many millions of no-gun folks—agree that Luckies taste better. Students, for example, prefer Luckies to all other brands, according to the latest, biggest coast-to-coast college survey. Once again, no one can say that Lucky is not the cigarette of fine tobacco.

We're happy to call your attention to Toasted. Toasted!—the famous Lucky Strike process—tones up Luckies' light, mild, good-tasting tobacco to make it taste even better. So, enjoy the better-tasting cigarette... Lucky Strike.

Lucky Strike TASTE BETTER
Cleaner, Fresher, Smoother!