Hockey Rink Opens Tomorrow;
Admission Free For MIT Family

Weather permitting, the new artificial ice rink on Briggs Field will be ready for use today. The opening game, for the benefit of the rink, will be played tomorrow afternoon.

A one-week trial run of the rink will begin Tuesday, the 10th of January, with admission charged at 25 cents a game. Thereafter, admission will be free to all members of the Institute community. The rink will be in regular operation from January 10 to April 15.

G. M. Seiler, head of the Intramural Sport Department, recently announced that the MIT gymnasium facilities are inadequate to handle the growing interest in ice hockey, and that the opening of the rink will provide a suitable outlet for the sport.

Colleges Pushing Red Youth Quest For U.S. Visas

Student leaders at six colleges and universities have urged Secretary of State John Foster Dulles that the student councils and editorial boards have invited the Soviet students to visit their campuses and have asked them to act as hosts to the Russians.

The Russian student editors were thought to be a hungry friend raiding the campus at night.
