TOWARD BETTER TEACHING—THE GOODWIN MEDAL

Probably one of the roughest and least appreciated tasks assigned to the Institute is the job of the graduate instructor. One can undoubtedly become quite frustrated over futile efforts to pound some knowledge into our collective undergraduate heads, and it is a continuing source of irritation with which many of these men take their work that the quality of instruction remains as high as it does. For the graduate teacher has his own studies to pursue, and receives little recognition or acclaim for his performances at the head of the classroom.

None of us need be reminded how very important a good instructor is to the student. It is his duty to help those who listen to make the best of his capabilities, and he is responsible for his job and his results; the teacher who prepares for his job and has the time for successfully communicating what he knows to those who listen can make or break the subject matter, as well as the student's grade.

It is indeed gratifying, then, to be able to note that these rare men are being cultivated and these valuable abilities being honored with the annual presentation of the Goodwin Medal for exceptional ability and effectiveness as a teacher.

EFFICIENCY PLUS

An example which many organizations on campus could do well to follow is the efficiency with which Mr. Robert R. Masterton, superintendent of East Campus, this week dispatched within 45 minutes, the request of the House Committee for a poster rack in the dorm office.

INEFFICIENCY MINUS

Wednesday, InsComm again attempted to prove that it is the talkiest organization MIT has seen for many a year. After three hours of discussion, it decided that it didn't really know yet what its constitution would resolve with its committee work, but after 15 minutes it agreed to start an investigation of activity income—immediate and thorough—since that might be a step toward the solution of the problem. The Activities Council representative will take a year and a half to complete.

The Activities Council representative said the committee who framed the InsComm constitution thought activity information and opinion would be best represented by an Activity man. Unfortunately he went down to ignominious defeat on this investigation motion as the lone dissenter. No one on InsComm could conceive that the man from the Activities Council knew more about how to conduct investigations of sources of activity income and its eventual use than they may have created among the student body.

The work of this committee, contrary to a recent report issued by The Tech, has not "deteriorated into political squabbling," and work was not "in the water when the sentence was drawn by the Institute Committee in its recent discussion of the Student-Faculty Committee's activities. Furthermore, we may point out that we have been actively engaged with our faculty members over the past year in the discussion of various topics devoted to the improvement of student-faculty relations at MIT. It seems regrettable in this case that The Tech, as the representative voice of the student body, should have permitted the publication of statements unqualified by fact and the assertion of opinions which clearly lacked objectivity.

Pierre Considine-Lambert Chairman Student-Faculty Committee March 2, 1955

Activities

(Continued from Page 1)

ready mentioned, Neff stated that in investigating motion of activity income and its eventual use were discussed. Neff further said that in light of the coming change-over of Activities Council personnel, no meaningful action could be contemplated. Neff views the investigation as taking a year and a half for completion.

Because of the yet undetermined scope of this motion, no one really knows what effect the activities on the activities will be. It could develop into anything from a mutually cooperative session between the activities and Activities Council to a continual and long term policing of the activities. One of the first actions of the new Activities Council will be the determination of this no doubt "in the water" when the sentence was drawn by the Institute Committee in its recent discussion of the Student-Faculty Committee's activities. Furthermore, we may point out that we have been actively engaged with our faculty members over the past year in the discussion of various topics devoted to the improvement of student-faculty relations at MIT. It seems regrettable in this case that The Tech, as the representative voice of the student body, should have permitted the publication of statements unqualified by fact and the assertion of opinions which clearly lacked objectivity.

Pierre Considine-Lambert Chairman Student-Faculty Committee March 2, 1955

The incident referred to occurred at the recent Boston College College World. It seems regrettable in this case that The Tech, as the representative voice of the student body, should have permitted the publication of statements unqualified by fact and the assertion of opinions which clearly lacked objectivity.

The incident referred to occurred at the recent Boston College College World. It seems regrettable in this case that The Tech, as the representative voice of the student body, should have permitted the publication of statements unqualified by fact and the assertion of opinions which clearly lacked objectivity.

Pierre Considine-Lambert Chairman Student-Faculty Committee March 2, 1955

Activities

(Continued from Page 1)

ready mentioned, Neff stated that in investigating motion of activity income and its eventual use were discussed. Neff further said that in light of the coming change-over of Activities Council personnel, no meaningful action could be contemplated. Neff views the investigation as taking a year and a half for completion.

Because of the yet undetermined scope of this motion, no one really knows what effect the activities on the activities will be. It could develop into anything from a mutually cooperative session between the activities and Activities Council to a continual and long term policing of the activities. One of the first actions of the new Activities Council will be the determination of this no doubt "in the water" when the sentence was drawn by the Institute Committee in its recent discussion of the Student-Faculty Committee's activities. Furthermore, we may point out that we have been actively engaged with our faculty members over the past year in the discussion of various topics devoted to the improvement of student-faculty relations at MIT. It seems regrettable in this case that The Tech, as the representative voice of the student body, should have permitted the publication of statements unqualified by fact and the assertion of opinions which clearly lacked objectivity.

Pierre Considine-Lambert Chairman Student-Faculty Committee March 2, 1955

Activities

(Continued from Page 1)

ready mentioned, Neff stated that in investigating motion of activity income and its eventual use were discussed. Neff further said that in light of the coming change-over of Activities Council personnel, no meaningful action could be contemplated. Neff views the investigation as taking a year and a half for completion.

Because of the yet undetermined scope of this motion, no one really knows what effect the activities on the activities will be. It could develop into anything from a mutually cooperative session between the activities and Activities Council to a continual and long term policing of the activities. One of the first actions of the new Activities Council will be the determination of this no doubt "in the water" when the sentence was drawn by the Institute Committee in its recent discussion of the Student-Faculty Committee's activities. Furthermore, we may point out that we have been actively engaged with our faculty members over the past year in the discussion of various topics devoted to the improvement of student-faculty relations at MIT. It seems regrettable in this case that The Tech, as the representative voice of the student body, should have permitted the publication of statements unqualified by fact and the assertion of opinions which clearly lacked objectivity.

Pierre Considine-Lambert Chairman Student-Faculty Committee March 2, 1955

Activities

(Continued from Page 1)

ready mentioned, Neff stated that in investigating motion of activity income and its eventual use were discussed. Neff further said that in light of the coming change-over of Activities Council personnel, no meaningful action could be contemplated. Neff views the investigation as taking a year and a half for completion.

Because of the yet undetermined scope of this motion, no one really knows what effect the activities on the activities will be. It could develop into anything from a mutually cooperative session between the activities and Activities Council to a continual and long term policing of the activities. One of the first actions of the new Activities Council will be the determination of this no doubt "in the water" when the sentence was drawn by the Institute Committee in its recent discussion of the Student-Faculty Committee's activities. Furthermore, we may point out that we have been actively engaged with our faculty members over the past year in the discussion of various topics devoted to the improvement of student-faculty relations at MIT. It seems regrettable in this case that The Tech, as the representative voice of the student body, should have permitted the publication of statements unqualified by fact and the assertion of opinions which clearly lacked objectivity.

Pierre Considine-Lambert Chairman Student-Faculty Committee March 2, 1955

Activities

(Continued from Page 1)

ready mentioned, Neff stated that in investigating motion of activity income and its eventual use were discussed. Neff further said that in light of the coming change-over of Activities Council personnel, no meaningful action could be contemplated. Neff views the investigation as taking a year and a half for completion.

Because of the yet undetermined scope of this motion, no one really knows what effect the activities on the activities will be. It could develop into anything from a mutually cooperative session between the activities and Activities Council to a continual and long term policing of the activities. One of the first actions of the new Activities Council will be the determination of this no doubt "in the water" when the sentence was drawn by the Institute Committee in its recent discussion of the Student-Faculty Committee's activities. Furthermore, we may point out that we have been actively engaged with our faculty members over the past year in the discussion of various topics devoted to the improvement of student-faculty relations at MIT. It seems regrettable in this case that The Tech, as the representative voice of the student body, should have permitted the publication of statements unqualified by fact and the assertion of opinions which clearly lacked objectivity.

Pierre Considine-Lambert Chairman Student-Faculty Committee March 2, 1955

Activities

(Continued from Page 1)

ready mentioned, Neff stated that in investigating motion of activity income and its eventual use were discussed. Neff further said that in light of the coming change-over of Activities Council personnel, no meaningful action could be contemplated. Neff views the investigation as taking a year and a half for completion.

Because of the yet undetermined scope of this motion, no one really knows what effect the activities on the activities will be. It could develop into anything from a mutually cooperative session between the activities and Activities Council to a continual and long term policing of the activities. One of the first actions of the new Activities Council will be the determination of this no doubt "in the water" when the sentence was drawn by the Institute Committee in its recent discussion of the Student-Faculty Committee's activities. Furthermore, we may point out that we have been actively engaged with our faculty members over the past year in the discussion of various topics devoted to the improvement of student-faculty relations at MIT. It seems regrettable in this case that The Tech, as the representative voice of the student body, should have permitted the publication of statements unqualified by fact and the assertion of opinions which clearly lacked objectivity.