and other literature in order to familiarize themselves with the problem. The students then present a plan of attack. Criticisms and suggestions are made, but for the most part, the final decisions are made by the students. After a procedure has been outlined and approved, the necessary experimental equipment is built and the actual test is performed.

After the problem has been solved an acceptable written report is necessary for completion. Since an engineer is rated for his ability to talk as well as write, oral reports are required in addition to the written reports. These oral presentations are always followed by a question period.

In addition to the above activities tours are conducted in the Oak Ridge area and in plants in the surrounding area. Each man is required to give two 20-minute talks during the course, one on any technical subject and one on any nontechnical subject he may choose.

One semester of MIT graduate school credit is obtained by completing the Practic School program. This credit may be applied toward advanced degrees in various engineering and scientific courses.

The major roles are portraits of all men. These, mixed together in a plot involving the ice age, dinosaurs, the deluge, Noah’s Ark, and war — such as fascinating composite picture of the tribulations of man. The Sites of Our Faith is the corresponding tribute to man’s industrialist.

UCC Holds Dedication Service

On Thursday, May 12, 1955, at 8:10 P.M., the United Christian Council of MIT will conduct a service dedicating their use of the Chapel. Dr. Theodore F. Pfeiffer, pastor of Trinity Church, Boston, and member of the Corporation, will preach the sermon. Dr. John Goodenough, faculty resident on Kent Campus, and Russell Hobbs, ’56, will assist in the service. George Paxson of Trinity Church and head of the Organ Department of New England Conservatory of Music will play.

Tickets have been issued in order that all official delegations may be assured seats. These tickets are being distributed to members of the faculty, administration and student government, and to students and ministers through the various members of the United Christian Council. The doors will be opened to the public at 8:00 P.M., after that time a ticket will not be necessary for admission, and holding a ticket will no longer ensure a seat.

The United Christian Council is made up of representatives from the various Protestant and Orthodox Christian groups in the MIT Community; the organization was formerly known as FOCH.
