About a month ago, there took place, in Bandung, an Asian-African conference, attended by the representatives of twenty-nine nations. These nations met to discuss their mutual problems and their positions, relative to each other and the rest of the world. Perhaps the most important aspect of the conference is the fact that it took place—i.e., that it has the states of themselves as an entity, and of their own potential as a third power bloc.

The villains of the conference, according to the American press was India's foreign minister, Nehru. Said Life, "India's Pandit Nehru and Russia's Chou En-lai seemed agreed on overall strategy... Nehru chaperoned Chou about..." Newsweek pictured him drawing "delicately on his black bone cigarette" while waiting for "lesser delegates to pay their respects."

"There is rather a calm acceptance of the status quo, a quiet resignation to the facts. India's economic potential is just beginning to be realized, and this has to depend upon a great deal of human effort and a great deal of money. But India has no money..."

India feels that since Communist China is a fact, our recognition of it simply aggravates the problem by making communications almost impossible. Nehru adds, "the people who feel I am 'pro-Communist' are wrong."

As for India's attitude towards the United States, Nehru thinks it is one of 'extreme friendliness', in spite of the suspicions aroused by our identification with colonialism (India—China) and reaction (Chiang, Rhee, et al.) what he calls our "gap by association."

After explaining India's desire to be self-sufficient, he says, "American technical aid and advice have given us the push we needed. We hope it will continue..."
