Peter Dyke Chosen As First "Athlete Of The Week"

In introducing a column which has long been missing from the sports pages of The Tech, this is the first of a series of weekly "Athletic of the Week" write-ups. The choice as to who that athlete will be will lie with the sports department, but the opinions of the coaches and involved members of the student body will generally carry great weight in this determination. The Athletic Association has offered its fullest cooperation in aiding in selecting the information, and in considering the possibility of presenting a medalion to each honored beaver.

In inaugurating the column, we have chosen our first athlete of the week, Peter "Leaky" Dyke. The blond, 5', 10" senior was a rather obvious choice in that he is exceptional in both the soccer and the lacrosse teams this year, and has won varsity letters in both of these sports for two years, with this being his third.

The son of a Tech graduate and class of '22, Leaky hails from Westfield, N.J. and is in Course X. He spent his high school years in New England in '54. Probably his greatest single athletic achievement was in the '56 Stephens Institute lacrosse game, when Pete scored a phenomenal total of four goals and one assist.

Dyke's abilities have not been limited to the playing fields at the Institute, and two of his major activities have been his membership in Beta Theta Pi and his leadership of his Fraternity, and T.C.A.
