In January, 1944, he was discharged from the army. At this time he won his second full scholarship to Tanglewood, but again he chose not to accept it, in order that he might spend the summer working towards his degree. During the school year 1946-47, while studying at B.U., he accepted the post of assistant band director in Medford. He also received his brass ensemble playing and his arranging.

John received his bachelors degree in music from B.U. in June, 1947. In September of the same year he assumed the position in Brookline which he holds today. In the fall of 1948, John Corley received a letter from a Professor Klaus Liepmann, director of music at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, requesting a meeting between the two of them.
