ASME To Sponsor Wed. Discussions

In an effort to serve the Mechanical Engineering students the Educational Committee of the ASME is sponsoring a Course 1 coffee hour every Wednesday from 3:30 to 4:30 in the Miller Room (B-70). The first such event will be on November 20 when Prof. Wason will discuss the "Marking Policy of the Mechanical Engineering Department." Future discussions will be posted.

The success of this enterprise depends entirely upon the cooperation of both the faculty and the students. The coffee hours have been tried before and have met with little success; however the Department is again placing them with the intention of creating a greater understanding of the facilities offered within the department, and providing greater opportunity for the students to meet the faculty outside the classroom. In addition, it is hoped that these sessions will help understand in their course selection and explore their future selection and employment problems. Freshmen considering Course I are particularly welcome.

Activities Council

The lone member of the committee who, at first, appeared interested, helped, and finally dropped the issue. When the Managing Board was asked if they thought they were responsible for the mistakes of previous boards they really don't, for they had had no control over them. At the time of the meeting a TEN representative asked if a report on the minutes of the meetings could be made public with either their affirmation or their negation so as to condemn or completely approve TEN. The Chairman replied that this was quite possible.

Concert Band

the minutes flew by, and the large audience appeared to enjoy every moment. Two works which special mention are the Beethoven and the Mendelssohn. The Military March is an amazing composition which displays the same genius and admired construction of the composer's other works while Coriolan, a powerful piece of great rhythm complexity, was played with amazing spirit and competence, made almost unapproachable when one considers that it had but two rehearsals.
