East Campus Considers Dance

This Wednesday, East Campus Residence Council is planning to vote on outlawing gambling in the lounges, in the light of the residents to last week’s ban. It was brought out that supporters of this motion for the most part were interested in improving the condition of the lounges, presumably by decreas- ing its use to the most violent of students, although several people did express objections to gambling purely on moral grounds.

After much discussion, two motions were finally brought to a vote, both on roll calls.
The first, a motion to rescind completely the ban on gambling, was defeated, 18 to 6, while the second, which would have permitted gambling in the Common Room, the pool room, and the living room was defeated, 12 to 30.

Among the other suggestions made, but not formally introduced because of the details that still needed to be worked out, was the establishment of a rigid system of fines and punishments for damage caused in the

For years Harvard students have reaped the benefits of a publication owned by the students and operated by the students, Senatus; an annual listing of map covers and genealogy. This year Senatus; a new convention was added for a short while. This was an organization called “Vesperal Committee” which were then known for Harvard alumni at least seven years, those who had pages. This organization has, however, been going on for a very vigorous respect of the Harvard tradition.
The Harvard word be commended for its part in subverting this newest move in the master plan to extend the Harvard undergraduates’ free time to 25 hours a week.

For years... it has been realized by all concerned that it’s the women’s movement is lacking the
