Don Pasquale Played to Capacity Audience; Performance Praised

by William J. Asten '56

Sunday night a capacity audience in Kresge Auditorium saw the final performance of the New England Opera Theatre's seasons-long production of Don Pasquale. The months of intense preparation brought about a fine result, and Mr. Goldovsky is to be again congratulated for another fine production.

Mr. Goldovsky's portrayal of the absurd Don Pasquale contained all of the comic elements of the opera. His voice was suited to the role, and his every movement was a joy to see. Robert Gay, in the role of Doctor, seemed to relish his part. His voice lacked volume and was far from smooth. A darker voice would have been better suited for the part. It seemed incredible that Jovice and Emelie never did see through Pasquale's schemes.

countries. With the undeveloped countries, perhaps the most dominant issue is that of development. It is necessary to become industrial, and, in a sense, economically self-sufficient. There is a very strong fear of the economic success of the Western powers. One thing that might happen is a withdrawal of aid. In general, Asian countries are trying to stay away from economic alliances in order to keep their independence, and to get a position of importance without military strength. They want to be able to vote as they feel on each issue, and not be tied to a block and vote as the block votes.

For Western Europe, it was felt important to try and unify Germany, but not at the expense of having Germany fall into Soviet hands. It appeared to the delegates that we have been using common means to win countries to our type of democracy. While the Russians are using force. The recent shift of the Peace Pledge Union is a significant piece of the puzzle. It appears to be a recognition on their part of the effectiveness of our stand. We have reached a position where it will be necessary to compete in an economic as well as a weapon race.

As one of the strongest pressures on most undeveloped countries is ob taining capital to start their country on the road to economic growth, the conference realized that we must develop a world wide economic program, administered without any military or political strings attached.

DROODRES, Copyright 1953 by Roger Price

"There's no getting around it—Luckie tastes better. And there's no getting around that thing in the Droodle at left, either—the Droodle's titled: Lucky smoker with bum seat at football game. Poor guy is really up against it. But he's got a small point of view on smoking—he smokes Luckies for better taste. Luckies taste better because they're made of 50% more tobacco. Chances are our friend in Section 28 is thinking, "This is the best-tasting cigarette I ever smoked!"

"It's toasted to taste better!"
