The Tech

Editor's Note: This is the third in a series of part II. Hauptman's report on the area of value theory. The death of Thomas Clark has focused attention upon the Institute and placed in jeopardy the policy of student responsibility. Not the result of negligence, the Clark tragedy was caused by a fault in the fraternity "bell work" system. It would be unfortunate if all students should suffer because of the situation which has existed in the Institute for years. No individual at the Institute can be blamed for the tragic incident; none should suffer because of it.

The results of the IFC study of "bell work" now undergone an extended period of reexamination. As a student body he will ever remember the legend of "bell work." "Bell work" is not the only problem involving the fraternities which confines the Institute. Restrictive clauses have long been in the fraternity by-laws, but the solving of this problem is no small task. As a point of not so long ago. More important than these specific problems is the question of the place of the fraternity in the Institute as a whole. The educational place of the dormitories at the Institute should be answered by the IFC Committee, whose first recommendations will be made public Monday. There is pressing need now for a similar study of the fraternities.

Such an investigation and evaluation would serve as a valuable frame of reference for any future specific action, involving the fraternities, would spot any potentially dangerous aspects, and, most important, would make clear the traditions which determine many of the fraternity practices and which were responsible for the "pledge walk."

Fraternity Evaluation?

The and teacher, the more both will profit. A chance remark of a teacher in such a situation may change a student's life. The professional specialty of the teacher is of little importance in this connection. As a student once said to Socrates: "I never knew anything about you, but whenever I spoke with you I became a better man."

The value understanding of the teaching process is particularly important in the evaluation of M.I.T. and teaching, the closer to the future housing situation in its effect on the interpersonal relationships between, faculty, student, and the student. This is not in present being studied by the IFC Committee on Student Housing and will be reflected in its recommendations.

The second context is again in connection with counseling. The largest number of problems encountered with individual students was their complaint about the impersonal character of teaching, to the point that dissatisfaction with the whole learning process and actually the desire to quit in disillusionment—an attitude recently expressed in Form A, reprinted in full on page 2. All too frequently is a clear understanding of the values involved.

The first play, "The Shy and the Lonely," directed by Michael Haigh, was an ideal play for a college group, both the man of the world (played by Joseph Haigh). The second play, "Fumed Oak," directed by David Al (played by Ellery Stone) and the brilliant logic of Pete, Larry (played by Hillel Auerbach), the athletic wisdom of Al (played by Ellery Stone) and the brilliant logic of Pete, Larry (played by Hillel Auerbach), the athletic wisdom of Lee (played by William Turisi, both scene-stealers in their respective plays. The production."
