standing room only

"The Teahouse of the August Moon" by John Patrick Stinson is being performed at the Boston Arts Theatre. The play is directed by Edward P. Thomas Bond and features a cast of local actors. The teahouse is a symbol of the Japanese culture and serves as the backdrop for the story of a man named Sakini, who, through his experience in the teahouse, learns the beauty of passive achievemen

COMING...

"The Ziegfeld Follies" is returning to the stage at the Fine Arts Theatre. Tallulah Bankhead will be joining the cast, adding to the excitement of this musical. The show opens on April 16th.

"The Teahouse of the August Moon" continues through Saturday at the Fine Arts Theatre. The play is directed by Edward P. Thomas Bond and features a cast of local actors. The teahouse is a symbol of the Japanese culture and serves as the backdrop for the story of a man named Sakini, who, through his experience in the teahouse, learns the beauty of passive achievement.

Heimbach F. Thomas Bond

"The Teahouse of the August Moon" is a play that explores the effects of the war on a Japanese family. The story is set in a teahouse in Japan, and it follows the life of a man named Sakini, who learns the beauty of passive achievement through his experiences in the teahouse.

From one of America's most scholarly critics, these words: "Nothing succeeds like success" is true of the theatre, too. It moves-it virtually runs-through a script, and the touch of humor and cutting philosophy keeps the show moving. One of the hands which were solved successfully by both teams was in Harvard Square, is running an original melodrama, "The Teahouse of the August Moon.

the kibitzer

Lou Katz, who recently finished eighth in the U.S. National Individual Championships after leading the first round, and his partner Jim W. Lee, who began a Life Master at the MIT Choral Society. Concert with a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony, Eunice Alberts, contralto; Donald Sullivan, baritone. The Calendar of Events is distributed to the staff through the Information Office. It is updated weekly and includes information on campus events, lectures, concerts, and other activities.