Technique Editors Name Fassett As Ideal “Teacher, Dean, Friend”

Frederick Gardner Fassett will be honored in the forthcoming edition of Technique 1956, it was announced at a banquet in his honor last Friday at Endicott House.

The text of the dedication entitled “A Note of Appreciation,” is as follows:

“Over a quarter of a century ago Frederick Gardner Fassett came to Technology. He became a member of the Department of English and History where he soon found himself teaching Literature. Later, as Editor of the Technology Review, he brought this enthusiasm to alumni, many of whom remember Dean Fassett as the outstanding personality at Tech.

“As a Woodsman Fred Fassett has no peer, for he has spent many months camping and exploring 'down east' in Maine. His service to the undergraduates of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is evident to its most perfect student before one can counsel or teach him.

“In recognition of those qualities of humanitarianism which we feel were inherent in a true Dean of Students, we, the editors of Technique 1956, extend our appreciation to Frederick Gardner Fassett for his service to the undergraduates of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.”
