The college world

The Criterion reports "Some of the nation's leading educators are seriously considering a plan to found an experimental liberal arts college that would draw support from the country's foremost centers of learning. The planned college—still an undefined proposal lacking common agreement—would probably be a small research-oriented institution staffed largely by visiting faculty members.

The Fund for the Advancement of Education, a subsidary of the Ford Foundation, is initiating the plan which has proceeded to the point of asking several institutions if they would support the project. The college would be supported almost entirely by tuition with any deficit filled by state which has installed AFROTC training for women and assure its successful and continuous operation.
