Dormton Puts Foot To Food Salesmen: Cites Rule Violation

The Tech Sandwich Men have been forbidden to sell sandwiches in the MIT dormitories.

Explaining why he had issued the order prohibiting sandwich sales from transacting any business in the dormitories or entering any dormitory for the purpose of transacting such business, Dick Bloomstein '57, said that the dormitories had not had the need to regulate solicitors and anyone else people wandering around the dorms. The Tech sandwich men so far have been the past been soliciting in the dormitories, but recently had violated rules. The specific violation was: not obeying a permit as required by the rules, in spite of repeated warnings; operating when their permit was not in effect; and having more than one salesmen in Baker house. This last was specifically forbidden under the permit the sandwich men had received.

Bloomstein said that he had personally encountered more academicians who were not foots.

"By their present system of operation in violation of Baker rules we have no assurance that all the solicitors are members of the MIT community, not outsiders ... This junction was brought forward after I had examined the general feeling in Baker was either indifferent or unresponsive toward soliciting.

Bloomstein added that although the violations of these sorts occurred in Baker house, so an aggregate of other dormitories had the power to forbid the sandwich men from selling in all the dorms.

Charity Drive Lags; Blame Interest Lack

The TCA Charity Drive has fallen short of its objective by about $1,200.

The drive, which lasted from the 28th of November to the 2nd of December, was expected to collect about $4,200 which was to be distributed among five causes: Red Cross, the Jimmy Fund, Cancer, Cerebral Palsy, and the World University Service. Of this, about $1,200 has been officially received as of now, and is estimated by Travis Amos '58, vice-president of TCA, there is about $800 more.

The reason for the low sum, according to Amos is that "there was not sufficient attention among people." Other members of TCA feel that the drive did not really push the one house.

In East Campus collected 44 cent reports by the people living in the house. Amos says that the affairs' of the variety had as little as 25c and 45c per cent.

that Balch's action was justified.

"The case," says Flanagan. "is now a bit obscure. The whole case is getting together Friday. They are a bit suspicious of all this. We have to consider the ERA's the real integral of the whole thing.
