In March Dr. Compton announced plans for subdividing the Institute in order to release the campus of Vanevar Bush '37 as the first Vice-President of the Institute. Dr. Bush had been a member of the faculty of electrical engineering since 1925. His work in this field was recognized by his appointment as a member of the Corporation. Plans also were made to establish the School of Engineering, School of Architecture, School of Commerce, School of Human Ecology, Division of Humanities, Division of Industrial Cooperation, and explicit recognition of the academic departments.

In the summer of 1935 Dr. Compton and a group of students from the School of Architecture were engaged in planning the new academic organization.

The first issue of the Student published in 1928, stated that the present managing board of the Student was formed by the merger of the Student and the magazine "Voo Doo," which was a monthly journal edited by the students for a period of time. The Student published a statement in the spring of 1929 which stated that the present managing board of the Student had decided to change the name of the magazine from "Voo Doo" to "The Tech." The Tech had been published since 1928.

1939: Expansion Despite Depression

The fall term brought the Institute to 500 dollars, the second one hundred dollars increase in tuition from 1902 to 1921. The class of 1933 participated in an anti-Nazi parade of 935 persons, the last parade of this nature. The Tech surveyed Institute opinion and found that the students were in favor of an "unofficial boycott" of German goods.

The pollsters also discovered later in the year that the students and faculty were predominantly for the United Nations.

The fall term was notable for the following events:

1. The Tech surveyed Institute opinion and discovered that the students were in favor of the "unofficial boycott" of German goods.
2. The pollsters also discovered later in the year that the students and faculty were predominantly for the United Nations.

In April more than 200 Tech students participated in an anti-Nazi parade of 935 persons, the last parade of this nature. The Tech surveyed Institute opinion and found that the students were in favor of an "unofficial boycott" of German goods.

The pollsters also discovered later in the year that the students and faculty were predominantly for the United Nations.

The fall term was notable for the following events:

1. The Tech surveyed Institute opinion and discovered that the students were in favor of the "unofficial boycott" of German goods.
2. The pollsters also discovered later in the year that the students and faculty were predominantly for the United Nations.

In April more than 200 Tech students participated in an anti-Nazi parade of 935 persons, the last parade of this nature. The Tech surveyed Institute opinion and found that the students were in favor of an "unofficial boycott" of German goods.

The pollsters also discovered later in the year that the students and faculty were predominantly for the United Nations.

In April more than 200 Tech students participated in an anti-Nazi parade of 935 persons, the last parade of this nature. The Tech surveyed Institute opinion and found that the students were in favor of an "unofficial boycott" of German goods.