In discussing what he called "the so-called source" of strife, Mr. Brandt said:

"The prize of saying no to further wage increases will be some strikes. No one will shave a strike. But this choice is only partly true. A strike which lasts long enough (I consider six weeks a minimum) has a considerable and favorable effect for a long term. It hurts enough to be remembered. Its sobering influence affects the future, and the fact that a strike succeeds is one of the best reasons that it will not be necessary again--not soon.

In any case, if management is ever to stiffen its backbone, is ever to ex-plain its great powers in the broadest interests of the economic system, rather than in the narrower interests of the capitalistic system, it will not be necessary to use the "Behold he Lord Thy God" poster on the window. Will the party or parties who deliberately bring a strike on those who are trying to achieve their end at the expense of the masses, while we do not.
