Evans New PRC Chairman

Evans 89 was appointed chairman of the Public Relations Committee (PRC) at a meeting of the Freshman Class Council. The projects which evolve out of her responsibilities include preparation of the Freshman Handbook, a student-administrative committee to handle freshmen problems, and another committee to handle special activities.

Patrick J. McGovern '59, outgoing freshman chairman, predicts that approximately 60% of the student body will be involved in student programs this year. A section of advice on how to get the most out of your experience will be published the first week in September. This booklet will inform freshmen of the co-curricular activities and help them take advantage of the opportunities available. Small group discussions will be held to give new students a chance to talk with upperclassmen.

Student Honors

For the first time, the newly-implemented student-program student will be selected in cooperation with the admissions office. In this procedure, PRC members will hand out cards to the high school students who come into the Institute. These cards will be returned to the PRC with the students' names, hometown and picture. From these cards, the PRC will select the class of '62. A committee of eight will get to know the students better and give the PRC a better idea of how to handle problems such as homesickness may also be included. Members will be chosen on the basis of their qualifications and personalities for members of the MIT community diverse fully integrated.

A press conference is planned for the third week between the Freshman and Administration and the Public Relations Committee to announce the Freshman Handbook and explain the benefits of student articles and stories.
