Competition, Classes Satisfy MIT Athletic Grad Requirements

The MIT physical education program requires every student to complete a minimum of eight athletic events by the end of the sophomore year. These points can be accrued through participation in the various intramural sports or by enrolling in a physical education class. Medical examinations, swimming and physical fitness tests are recommended for participation in swimming or physical education classes. Medical examinations are also necessary for eligibility in intercollegiate sports as well as for freshmen. Two points are awarded for completing a quarter in a physical education course. Satisfactory participation in the varsity or freshman intercollegiate program awards two points per winter sport.
