Our scientists and engineers, with outstanding abilities in the fields of nuclear research, are actively at work on diversified projects such as:

- Nuclear devices
- Basic particle physics
- Nuclear powered reactor propulsion systems
- Controlled thermonuclear researches
- Engineering and scientific application of nuclear explosives to mining, security, and power

The finest facilities, and encouragement to exercise creative thinking and imagination, are offered quali-gfied graduates interested in research careers.

A rainy weekend threw off the intracural grid schedule as only one of the eight scheduled A Division games was played on Sunday (See story on this page).

As now planned the regular league should decide to a close next weekend, the postponed games of Sunday may complicate matters somewhat.
Dick Northrup '60, grid manager, said that the problem will probably have to be resolved by playing some of the rained out contests in the mornings this weekend.

In making the decision on when these games will be played, two factors are involved. The first is the length of the season. As planned the season would last three weekends (each of the four teams making each other in a round robin manner) and the outcome should be decided by the first weekend in December. Playing the morning games would loop things on schedule and thus guard against what happened last year when the season ran on so long that it was ended as snow appeared on the ground and three of the A Division teams were declared tied for the championship.

The other factor is the time involved for the players and coaches. Moring games would force three teams in two of the four A Division leagues to play twice on the same weekend.

7 A Division Contests Postponed:
Delts Smash for 3rd Victory 31-0

Delta Tau Delta moved its way to another victory by downsing Sigma Phi Epsilon 31-0 in the only intramural weather, the Deltas continued their high scoring attack on wind and rain except Briggs field. The bad weather plus underwater fields kept the seven other A Division games from being played.

The Deltas, who have averaged 40 points a game before Sunday, had comded the game. The wet weather and wind actually helped their cause. Even Roger Opper '39 little as he fumbled five of the six TD passes. Second play, hower was kept to a minimum in the first condition, and fumbling was common—such tembs but the slippery ball sat or seven times.

1:24 at half

After a scoreless first quarter the winners opened up with two tallies before the half—the fist from present To Dan Michael '61 and the second from Terry Brany '62 to Dan.

The second half was no different with Potter connecting with John Christian '62 to the one yard line, then with Bray for the score. Fourth quarter scoring ended another 13 points as Potter's throws were hauled down by Bert Smith '59 and Bray. Elic in the wet and wind the Deltas once again showed their powerful passing attack. Their running showed great potential, although the wet field detected from several sharp looking reverse plays.

The problem was not that Marty had fallen in love with a shirt. After all, he admired a Philosophy major.

The trouble was...Marty was in love with two shirts.

With Shirt No. 1, the Van Heusen Century, the serious Marty sprang forth in heavenly ly bliss. He worshipped the revolutionary soft collar that wasn't wrinkly, didn't wrinkle automatically —and wore it again in a matter of days. It was the man-van-Heusen-loving love he ever had.

But when Marty was with one of his muses, no matter it was. It was horrible. Like so many others with the same problem, Marty wrote to us. And so this one... Marty, van Heusen's one-piece construction caught his eye. The collar, he missed the other.
