Incommis Cleans House and Finds $15,000, Everett Baker Funds

National committees, held pro and con, have been set up to provide information about the 1956 World Festival of Youth and Students to be held in Vienna next summer. The Festival is the latest in a series of youth-oriented events organized by World War II by two leading Communist international front groups: World Federation of Democratic Youth, and the International Union of Students. Next summer’s meeting is the first to be held outside of the Soviet orbit.

During the last Festival, held in Moscow in 1955, several American students, presumably selected upon the U.S. State Department, unfortunately misrepresented their country, and laid the groundwork for a Russian propaganda attack. In order to provide students with comprehensive and objective data which may help to prevent a similar occurrence, a group of students and recent graduates, with offices in Harvard Square, have established the "Independent Service for Information on the Vienna Youth Festival." Based on the findings of "excessive and misleading" literature being sent to camps and youth organizations, the members of the Information Service four that many young people "do not realize the political and propagandistic nature of such festivals."

By preparing and distributing documented studies on the history and operation of past festivals and on the preparations for the coming one, the Information Service hopes to better inform the American youth who may wish to attend and visit the Festival.

In a statement to the press, they explained their purpose: "The organizers of the Information Service appeal to the parents, the student and youth groups in the U.S. and the Soviet Union to cooperate in exposing these meetings to the American public, as a constructive means for clarifying the political and propagandistic nature of such activities."

Festival Band Model Award to MIT Man

Thomas DeFazio, a sophomore majoring in mechanical engineering, has been named Festival Band Model Award by the Society of Musical Youth of Russia. Thomas DeFazio, a sophomore majoring in mechanical engineering, has been named Festival Band Model Award by the Society of Musical Youth of Russia.

During the last Festival, held in Moscow in 1957, several American students, presumably selected upon the U.S. State Department, unfortunately misrepresented their country, and laid the groundwork for a Russian propaganda attack. In order to provide students with comprehensive and objective data which may help to prevent a similar occurrence, a group of students and recent graduates, with offices in Harvard Square, have established the "Independent Service for Information on the Vienna Youth Festival." Based on the findings of "excessive and misleading" literature being sent to camps and youth organizations, the members of the Information Service four that many young people "do not realize the political and propagandistic nature of such festivals."

By preparing and distributing documented studies on the history and operation of past festivals and on the preparations for the coming one, the Information Service hopes to better inform the American youth who may wish to attend and visit the Festival.

In a statement to the press, they explained their purpose: "The organizers of the Information Service appeal to the parents, the student and youth groups in the U.S. and the Soviet Union to cooperate in exposing these meetings to the American public, as a constructive means for clarifying the political and propagandistic nature of such activities."

Festival Band Model Award to MIT Man

Thomas DeFazio, a sophomore majoring in mechanical engineering, has been named Festival Band Model Award by the Society of Musical Youth of Russia. Thomas DeFazio, a sophomore majoring in mechanical engineering, has been named Festival Band Model Award by the Society of Musical Youth of Russia.

During the last Festival, held in Moscow in 1957, several American students, presumably selected upon the U.S. State Department, unfortunately misrepresented their country, and laid the groundwork for a Russian propaganda attack. In order to provide students with comprehensive and objective data which may help to prevent a similar occurrence, a group of students and recent graduates, with offices in Harvard Square, have established the "Independent Service for Information on the Vienna Youth Festival." Based on the findings of "excessive and misleading" literature being sent to camps and youth organizations, the members of the Information Service four that many young people "do not realize the political and propagandistic nature of such festivals."

By preparing and distributing documented studies on the history and operation of past festivals and on the preparations for the coming one, the Information Service hopes to better inform the American youth who may wish to attend and visit the Festival.

In a statement to the press, they explained their purpose: "The organizers of the Information Service appeal to the parents, the student and youth groups in the U.S. and the Soviet Union to cooperate in exposing these meetings to the American public, as a constructive means for clarifying the political and propagandistic nature of such activities."

Festival Band Model Award to MIT Man

Thomas DeFazio, a sophomore majoring in mechanical engineering, has been named Festival Band Model Award by the Society of Musical Youth of Russia. Thomas DeFazio, a sophomore majoring in mechanical engineering, has been named Festival Band Model Award by the Society of Musical Youth of Russia.

During the last Festival, held in Moscow in 1957, several American students, presumably selected upon the U.S. State Department, unfortunately misrepresented their country, and laid the groundwork for a Russian propaganda attack. In order to provide students with comprehensive and objective data which may help to prevent a similar occurrence, a group of students and recent graduates, with offices in Harvard Square, have established the "Independent Service for Information on the Vienna Youth Festival." Based on the findings of "excessive and misleading" literature being sent to camps and youth organizations, the members of the Information Service four that many young people "do not realize the political and propagandistic nature of such festivals."

By preparing and distributing documented studies on the history and operation of past festivals and on the preparations for the coming one, the Information Service hopes to better inform the American youth who may wish to attend and visit the Festival.

In a statement to the press, they explained their purpose: "The organizers of the Information Service appeal to the parents, the student and youth groups in the U.S. and the Soviet Union to cooperate in exposing these meetings to the American public, as a constructive means for clarifying the political and propagandistic nature of such activities."

Festival Band Model Award to MIT Man

Thomas DeFazio, a sophomore majoring in mechanical engineering, has been named Festival Band Model Award by the Society of Musical Youth of Russia. Thomas DeFazio, a sophomore majoring in mechanical engineering, has been named Festival Band Model Award by the Society of Musical Youth of Russia.