A Warm Feeling

We left Kenge Auditorium last Tuesday night with a very warm feeling for the Institute and for its President. We feel that Dr. Stratton's speech to the students was an eminently successful event, and feel certain that it will be the keystone of a long series. The enthusiastic standing ovation which the President received showed we are not alone in our views.

We were, however, extremely disappointed in the student interest in the speech. Less than 300 people or only one out of every ten undergraduates had enough interest in the kind of education which they are receiving to spend Jell-O as an ear listening to the most important voice at MIT.

Dr. Stratton spent a good deal of time delving into the past history and motives behind the MIT education. We feel that this was a fascinating and even timely part of his talk, although it prevented him from going into some of the greatest general interest and worth.

We hope that next fall, speaking in the same line, the President will briefly sum up the points and background covered Tuesday—and then delve into many topics which he had hoped to cover this week.

We feel that the next Stratton speech will attract more interest than the first. If it does not, there is something vitally wrong with the Undergraduate body.

review

Bach's B-minor Mass

Klaus Linkmann has drawn enough appreciations of programmatic beauty at MIT that it becomes increasingly hard to say anything original about him. Having heard the B-Minor Mass last Friday, we must report that the chorus was in fine, coordinated, and strong. Their voices improved even more since The Fairy Queen last month. It was a pleasure to hear almost every word through the massive intricacies of this three-hour work.

As a group the soloists did not match up to the chorus. Caroline Boere, soprano, and Eileen Alberts, alto, seemed drawn up into themselves, unable to project their arias. We heard very little from the tenor, Donald Sullivan, except college vacations, by THE TECH-Walker Memorial, Cambridge, Massachusetts. Published every Tuesday and Friday during the academic year.

The Fairest Queen, 17TH Century Spanish

Tuesdays 3:30 and 7:30

University Square

47 Temple Street

IT'S SPRING!

IT'S SPRING!

BOSTON YESPA

1030 Commonwealth Ave

Boston

AT 7-5249

or

"F&S MOTORS"

55 Boylston St.

Cambridge

EL 4-6160

Cronin's Restaurant

30 Dunster Street off Harvard Square

Famous for

CHARCOAL BROILED STEAKS, CHOPS, SHISH KABOBS, and SEAFOOD

Dinner from 10o to 1:30

TRY OUR PORTERHOUSE STEAK FOR TWO-$1.95

Full line of Beer, Wines and Liquors

EL 1-4146

AIR CONDITIONED

AC UNIT AVAILABLE FOR YOUR COMFORT

Pies -- Steaks -- Spinach -- Ravidi -- Creole -- Chinese

A SNACK TO A FULL COURSE DINNER

Simeone's

ITALIAN-AMERICAN RESTAURANT

21 Bricklane St., Cambridge, Mass., off Mass. Ave. Tel. Elm 449541

A Warm Feeling

We left Kenge Auditorium last Tuesday night with a very warm feeling for the Institute and for its President. We feel that Dr. Stratton's speech to the students was an eminently successful event, and feel certain that it will be the keystone of a long series. The enthusiastic standing ovation which the President received showed we are not alone in our views.

We were, however, extremely disappointed in the student interest in the speech. Less than 300 people or only one out of every ten undergraduates had enough interest in the kind of education which they are receiving to spend Jell-O as an ear listening to the most important voice at MIT.

Dr. Stratton spent a good deal of time delving into the past history and motives behind the MIT education. We feel that this was a fascinating and even timely part of his talk, although it prevented him from going into some of the greatest general interest and worth.

We hope that next fall, speaking in the same line, the President will briefly sum up the points and background covered Tuesday—and then delve into many topics which he had hoped to cover this week.

We feel that the next Stratton speech will attract more interest than the first. If it does not, there is something vitally wrong with the Undergraduate body.

review

Bach's B-minor Mass

Klaus Linkmann has drawn enough appreciations of programmatic beauty at MIT that it becomes increasingly hard to say anything original about him. Having heard the B-Minor Mass last Friday, we must report that the chorus was in fine, coordinated, and strong. Their voices improved even more since The Fairy Queen last month. It was a pleasure to hear almost every word through the massive intricacies of this three-hour work.

As a group the soloists did not match up to the chorus. Caroline Boere, soprano, and Eileen Alberts, alto, seemed drawn up into themselves, unable to project their arias. We heard very little from the tenor, Donald Sullivan, except college vacations, by THE TECH-Walker Memorial, Cambridge, Massachusetts. Published every Tuesday and Friday during the academic year.

The Fairest Queen, 17TH Century Spanish

Tuesdays 3:30 and 7:30

University Square

47 Temple Street

IT'S SPRING!

BOSTON YESPA

1030 Commonwealth Ave

Boston

AT 7-5249

or

"F&S MOTORS"

55 Boylston St.

Cambridge

EL 4-6160

Cronin's Restaurant

30 Dunster Street off Harvard Square

Famous for

CHARCOAL BROILED STEAKS, CHOPS, SHISH KABOBS, and SEAFOOD

Dinner from 10o to 1:30

TRY OUR PORTERHOUSE STEAK FOR TWO-$1.95

Full line of Beer, Wines and Liquors

EL 1-4146

AIR CONDITIONED

AC UNIT AVAILABLE FOR YOUR COMFORT

Pies -- Steaks -- Spinach -- Ravidi -- Creole -- Chinese

A SNACK TO A FULL COURSE DINNER

Simeone's

ITALIAN-AMERICAN RESTAURANT

21 Bricklane St., Cambridge, Mass., off Mass. Ave. Tel. Elm 449541

A Warm Feeling

We left Kenge Auditorium last Tuesday night with a very warm feeling for the Institute and for its President. We feel that Dr. Stratton's speech to the students was an eminently successful event, and feel certain that it will be the keystone of a long series. The enthusiastic standing ovation which the President received showed we are not alone in our views.

We were, however, extremely disappointed in the student interest in the speech. Less than 300 people or only one out of every ten undergraduates had enough interest in the kind of education which they are receiving to spend Jell-O as an ear listening to the most important voice at MIT.

Dr. Stratton spent a good deal of time delving into the past history and motives behind the MIT education. We feel that this was a fascinating and even timely part of his talk, although it prevented him from going into some of the greatest general interest and worth.

We hope that next fall, speaking in the same line, the President will briefly sum up the points and background covered Tuesday—and then delve into many topics which he had hoped to cover this week.

We feel that the next Stratton speech will attract more interest than the first. If it does not, there is something vitally wrong with the Undergraduate body.

review

Bach's B-minor Mass

Klaus Linkmann has drawn enough appreciations of programmatic beauty at MIT that it becomes increasingly hard to say anything original about him. Having heard the B-Minor Mass last Friday, we must report that the chorus was in fine, coordinated, and strong. Their voices improved even more since The Fairy Queen last month. It was a pleasure to hear almost every word through the massive intricacies of this three-hour work.

As a group the soloists did not match up to the chorus. Caroline Boere, soprano, and Eileen Alberts, alto, seemed drawn up into themselves, unable to project their arias. We heard very little from the tenor, Donald Sullivan, except college vacations, by THE TECH-Walker Memorial, Cambridge, Massachusetts. Published every Tuesday and Friday during the academic year.

The Fairest Queen, 17TH Century Spanish

Tuesdays 3:30 and 7:30

University Square

47 Temple Street

IT'S SPRING!

BOSTON YESPA

1030 Commonwealth Ave

Boston

AT 7-5249

or

"F&S MOTORS"

55 Boylston St.

Cambridge

EL 4-6160

Cronin's Restaurant

30 Dunster Street off Harvard Square

Famous for

CHARCOAL BROILED STEAKS, CHOPS, SHISH KABOBS, and SEAFOOD

Dinner from 10o to 1:30

TRY OUR PORTERHOUSE STEAK FOR TWO-$1.95

Full line of Beer, Wines and Liquors

EL 1-4146

AIR CONDITIONED

AC UNIT AVAILABLE FOR YOUR COMFORT

Pies -- Steaks -- Spinach -- Ravidi -- Creole -- Chinese

A SNACK TO A FULL COURSE DINNER

Simeone's

ITALIAN-AMERICAN RESTAURANT

21 Bricklane St., Cambridge, Mass., off Mass. Ave. Tel. Elm 449541