Intramural Programs are Big Time

The MIT intramural program is probably the most comprehensive and overall organized system to be found in a university today. Over 1500 students take part in one way or another in the 50 different sports offered. Among these are basketball, touch football, softball, volleyball, bowling, tennis and badminton. Emphasis is placed on providing athletic competition for the greatest possible number of students. At the end of the year an all-sports trophy is awarded to the living group that accumulates the most intramural points by building the best teams in the event sports. Most houses get every eligible man to try new sports, as well as to compete in those in which he is already adept. The program is considered an effective means of integrating the members of a living group.

A berth on a varsity team or a previous varsity letter in a particular sport is the only disqualifying factor for members of a living group. The aim of the program is to give all Tech students a sub-varsity chance to compete in low-pressure, but spirited games. Every possible attempt has been made to encompass all phases of competition so that more and more Tech men may enter the sports of their choice.
