High School Counselors To Attend Meeting Here

Over 109 high school college advisers will be coming to MIT next Thursday and Friday in the fourth annual Guidance Conference. While here, they will hear the lectures by deans and departmental leaders, and present their own views of guidance problems in college and panel discussions.

The program, under the direction of Mr. Robert Wetherall of theAdmissions Office, is designed to teach the Admissions Office about the guidance information on college selection procedures. Among the programs scheduled for the visitors are: Beaux Belles, Bruce swearing off beer and Bibles, and planning on the concept of student unions; a discussion of Russian educational policy by Prof. Sanford Brown; and a special President's Brunch at the turn of MIT.

The guidance counselors will also participate in panel discussions.

At the top of the program is a luncheon on Thursday, October 6th, at which each visitor will be accompanied by an MIT student and will be led through the campus.

The counselors were from all parts of the country. Their hotel bills, plus all travel expenses above $50, are being paid by the Admissions Office.

Wetherall states that the benefits of the first three conventions are clearly seen since a member of the MIT Admissions Office visits a local high school. These are another phase of the "admissions-information" program. About thirty faculty members and admissions officers spend one week each year visiting high schools throughout the country. Each representative visits about fifteen schools each year.

Students of the second-year classes and freshmen will be present as representatives in which they will "promote" a new program in which they might have a voice in starting their own class government.

The Council, to be composed of one representative from each of the thirty-five sections, will hold the class of 80 and organize the Council for Field Day, the annual Freshmen-Sophomore fraternity event, which is planned for Saturday, November 1.

Student Loses Passport
Quick Return Imperative

Konstantinos Andreadis, a '62, civil engineering student from Athens, Greece, has lost his briefcase containing his passport at Walker Memorial on the evening of Sept. 28th. The Council has been reported to him at Ware 201 immediately.

The briefcase contained his passport, a book, passport, and the records will be covered up with samples of student staff duties.

For three days, the members of Walker Staff are now selling black and yellow "Beat" shirts for $1.50 apiece. The rest of the costume should be purchased at "Beat" stores for $1.50 apiece.
