Tech Show 1960

Tech Show, 1960, is a patchwork of seemingly unrelated songs, skits, and dancing, some of it very poor. Originally conceived as a musical comedy, Leave It to Eve, it is now a revue in which the office of the president who is incapable of fulfilling his term of office. That is, the UAP must be elected from the undergraduate student body at MIT and the college and be elected before the spring term would be able to perform his term. This year, the office of the president remains silent when a student who clearly cannot serve his full term in office if elected desires to be considered as a candidate. We urge Mr. Feinberg to reconsider his expressed desire to remain in the race, and help us keep the "U" in UAP.
