for what they are. Afro's expression may not be an easy one to grasp because he does not attempt what we have come to expect. Here, as ever, the means that "art is possible" remains so. Happily, art will be as diverse as artists are. We must meet them on their own terms if we can, in style. Well, something less than total capitulation perhaps, for one of the wonders of these works comes with the innovation between the creation and the viewer. Our cannot look and it once know what is what. How shall "art" be? We have to surrender degrees, but when we have lost ourselves completely, we have won. Whether the experience was worth winning you must decide for yourself. In spite of his seemingly slap-dash technique, Afro is an exacting draftsman and he is a master of his materials. Because of this technical competence, he can achieve a composition as integrated as one of Matisse, and yet seemingly substanceless, never brutally obvious. He can apply his technique rapidly without losing the accuracy of his intention, thus imparting a zest and freshness.

Opinion
In short, Afro grows on one. But not everyone will enjoy his paintings. Critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Critics carp that he "has nothing new to say"; critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Other artists carp that he "has nothing new to say." Critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Afro's expression for what they are. Afro's expression may not be an easy one to grasp because he does not attempt what we have come to expect. Here, as ever, the means that "art is possible" remains so.

The Tech

FRIDAY, APRIL 15, 1960

THEODORE MOORE, Saturday, April 16, 1960

M. A. GREENHILL presents

B I K E L

Sunday, April 24, 8:30 P.M.
JOHN HANCOCK HALL
Mail Orders, NAM: Fellow Productions, P. O. Box 227 — Boston, Mass.
Tickets: $3.75 — 3.25 — 2.75 — 2.25

for what they are. Afro's expression may not be an easy one to grasp because he does not attempt what we have come to expect. Here, as ever, the means that "art is possible" remains so. Happily, art will be as diverse as artists are. We must meet them on their own terms if we can, in style. Well, something less than total capitulation perhaps, for one of the wonders of these works comes with the innovation between the creation and the viewer. Our cannot look and it once know what is what. How shall "art" be? We have to surrender degrees, but when we have lost ourselves completely, we have won. Whether the experience was worth winning you must decide for yourself. In spite of his seemingly slap-dash technique, Afro is an exacting draftsman and he is a master of his materials. Because of this technical competence, he can achieve a composition as integrated as one of Matisse, and yet seemingly substanceless, never brutally obvious. He can apply his technique rapidly without losing the accuracy of his intention, thus imparting a zest and freshness.

Opinion
In short, Afro grows on one. But not everyone will enjoy his paintings. Critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Critics carp that he "has nothing new to say." Critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Other artists carp that he "has nothing new to say." Critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Afro's expression for what they are. Afro's expression may not be an easy one to grasp because he does not attempt what we have come to expect. Here, as ever, the means that "art is possible" remains so.

The Tech

FRIDAY, APRIL 15, 1960

THEODORE MOORE, Saturday, April 16, 1960

M. A. GREENHILL presents

B I K E L

Sunday, April 24, 8:30 P.M.
JOHN HANCOCK HALL
Mail Orders, NAM: Fellow Productions, P. O. Box 227 — Boston, Mass.
Tickets: $3.75 — 3.25 — 2.75 — 2.25

for what they are. Afro's expression may not be an easy one to grasp because he does not attempt what we have come to expect. Here, as ever, the means that "art is possible" remains so. Happily, art will be as diverse as artists are. We must meet them on their own terms if we can, in style. Well, something less than total capitulation perhaps, for one of the wonders of these works comes with the innovation between the creation and the viewer. Our cannot look and it once know what is what. How shall "art" be? We have to surrender degrees, but when we have lost ourselves completely, we have won. Whether the experience was worth winning you must decide for yourself. In spite of his seemingly slap-dash technique, Afro is an exacting draftsman and he is a master of his materials. Because of this technical competence, he can achieve a composition as integrated as one of Matisse, and yet seemingly substanceless, never brutally obvious. He can apply his technique rapidly without losing the accuracy of his intention, thus imparting a zest and freshness.

Opinion
In short, Afro grows on one. But not everyone will enjoy his paintings. Critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Critics carp that he "has nothing new to say." Critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Other artists carp that he "has nothing new to say." Critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Afro's expression for what they are. Afro's expression may not be an easy one to grasp because he does not attempt what we have come to expect. Here, as ever, the means that "art is possible" remains so.

The Tech

FRIDAY, APRIL 15, 1960

THEODORE MOORE, Saturday, April 16, 1960

M. A. GREENHILL presents

B I K E L

Sunday, April 24, 8:30 P.M.
JOHN HANCOCK HALL
Mail Orders, NAM: Fellow Productions, P. O. Box 227 — Boston, Mass.
Tickets: $3.75 — 3.25 — 2.75 — 2.25

for what they are. Afro's expression may not be an easy one to grasp because he does not attempt what we have come to expect. Here, as ever, the means that "art is possible" remains so. Happily, art will be as diverse as artists are. We must meet them on their own terms if we can, in style. Well, something less than total capitulation perhaps, for one of the wonders of these works comes with the innovation between the creation and the viewer. Our cannot look and it once know what is what. How shall "art" be? We have to surrender degrees, but when we have lost ourselves completely, we have won. Whether the experience was worth winning you must decide for yourself. In spite of his seemingly slap-dash technique, Afro is an exacting draftsman and he is a master of his materials. Because of this technical competence, he can achieve a composition as integrated as one of Matisse, and yet seemingly substanceless, never brutally obvious. He can apply his technique rapidly without losing the accuracy of his intention, thus imparting a zest and freshness.

Opinion
In short, Afro grows on one. But not everyone will enjoy his paintings. Critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Critics carp that he "has nothing new to say." Critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Other artists carp that he "has nothing new to say." Critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Afro's expression for what they are. Afro's expression may not be an easy one to grasp because he does not attempt what we have come to expect. Here, as ever, the means that "art is possible" remains so.

The Tech

FRIDAY, APRIL 15, 1960

THEODORE MOORE, Saturday, April 16, 1960

M. A. GREENHILL presents

B I K E L

Sunday, April 24, 8:30 P.M.
JOHN HANCOCK HALL
Mail Orders, NAM: Fellow Productions, P. O. Box 227 — Boston, Mass.
Tickets: $3.75 — 3.25 — 2.75 — 2.25

for what they are. Afro's expression may not be an easy one to grasp because he does not attempt what we have come to expect. Here, as ever, the means that "art is possible" remains so. Happily, art will be as diverse as artists are. We must meet them on their own terms if we can, in style. Well, something less than total capitulation perhaps, for one of the wonders of these works comes with the innovation between the creation and the viewer. Our cannot look and it once know what is what. How shall "art" be? We have to surrender degrees, but when we have lost ourselves completely, we have won. Whether the experience was worth winning you must decide for yourself. In spite of his seemingly slap-dash technique, Afro is an exacting draftsman and he is a master of his materials. Because of this technical competence, he can achieve a composition as integrated as one of Matisse, and yet seemingly substanceless, never brutally obvious. He can apply his technique rapidly without losing the accuracy of his intention, thus imparting a zest and freshness.

Opinion
In short, Afro grows on one. But not everyone will enjoy his paintings. Critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Critics carp that he "has nothing new to say." Critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Other artists carp that he "has nothing new to say." Critics complain that he is "not original, nothing new." Afro's expression for what they are. Afro's expression may not be an easy one to grasp because he does not attempt what we have come to expect. Here, as ever, the means that "art is possible" remains so. Happily, art will be as diverse as artists are. We must meet them on their own terms if we can, in style. Well, something less than total capitulation perhaps, for one of the wonders of these works comes with the innovation between the creation and the viewer. Our cannot look and it once know what is what. How shall "art" be? We have to surrender degrees, but when we have lost ourselves completely, we have won. Whether the experience was worth winning you must decide for yourself. In spite of his seemingly slap-dash technique, Afro is an exacting draftsman and he is a master of his materials. Because of this technical competence, he can achieve a composition as integrated as one of Matisse, and yet seemingly substanceless, never brutally obvious. He can apply his technique rapidly without losing the accuracy of his intention, thus imparting a zest and freshness.