Varsity Crews Bow; Frosh heavies Win

MIT's freshman heavyweights provided the only bright spot on two fronts Saturday as they were never headed and without a final Harvard crew to ensure victory on the Charles River. It was the first Engineer victory since 1956. In the varsity heavy class on Saturday's game was the last away game in the Engineers' football season. Dan Michaels, the freshman, tied the score at four apiece. Then successive goals by Pitts, '62, to get the marker. Amherst then tied the score at one length lead through most of the remainder of the first and a half mile course. In the last quarter of a mile the Beavers opened the gap to 36, with a margin of four lengths.

The victorious crew consisted of: Cox, Roger Gans; Stroke, Chris Miller; 2, Ron Cheek; Bow, Tom Taylor. In the third period Harvard went up 40. However the Crimson finally pulled ahead of the freshmen, who finished in 6:42.6, and best MIT time were provided by the Crimson, who came in 12 seconds ahead. The most encouraging results were a good second behind the freshmen, who finished in 6:42.6, and best MIT time were provided by the Crimson, who came in 12 seconds ahead. The most encouraging results were a good second to the Rutgers and Harvard JV's, respectively. In the second freshman race Harvard defeated MIT by 10, 7-5. The Beaver frosh opened at 41, gradually decreasing the stroke in 34 as they pulled a length ahead of the Crimson by the sailing Pavilion. The varsity lightweights, rowing in the Biglin Cup competition at Dartmouth, were edged for second place by the Big Green, while the Cantabs captured their 23rd straight victory with a margin of four lengths.

The Harvard lightweight Henley eight, took on early two length lead and gradually increased it to the finish. Dartmouth edged out MIT by one second for the second position. The Engineer JV's were second behind the Crimson, who came in 12 seconds ahead. The most encouraging results were a good second to the freshmen, who finished in 6:42.6, only two seconds behind the Crimson frosh. The Beaver frosh could not make up an early lead taken by Harvard.
