Chi Phi swept all honors, however, with a caricature of a bewildered beaver grasping a garish 1890s style decorated car on Saturday night. The interior of the Chi Phi car was done in garish 1890 style. Mrs. John T. Rule presented the trophy for the best decorated car on Saturday night.

Seeger Sings Ballads

Highlight of the Sturbridge excursion was an hour of folk-songs by balladeer Pete Seeger. Seeger congregated on the village green of Old Sturbridge to hear such traditional favorites as "Michael Row the Boat Ashore" and "Hey Liley Liley Bo," the second featuring contemporaneous verses composed by spectators. Many couples also toured the historic buildings of the old New England village.

Comedian Professor Irwin Corey opened Saturday night's jazz concert with a round of well-received patter on various subjects of interest. He was followed by an hour of soft sounds on piano, bass, vibraphone and drums by the Modern Jazz Quartet.

The Quartet played numerous jazz standards and several compositions of their own, including "Bluesology" and "Golden Leaves." The Four Freshmen completed Saturday's roll of entertainers. "Route 66" and "Candy" were two of the numbers done by the Freshmen. The concert was the most heavily attended of all Centennial functions. The three acts played to a packed house of 2500.

An unofficial but widely attended Centennial event was an open bid party held on Sunday afternoon by Phi Kappa Tau. The party boasted two bands, one mounted on a thirty-five foot flat bed trailer truck. Over three hundred people from all parts of MIT assembled to wind up the weekend at the party.

Previously announced plans for a beard growing contest and for a physics lecture delivered in the style of the 1860s were canceled.
