Religious Groups

Discussion has been going on recently about a proposed application to turn Cathedral into a Catholic Activity. The necessity of a concrete plan for a new religious center on campus has been a subject of much discussion. The present lack of any religious center has led to frequent meetings being held in various parts of the campus. The need for such a center is most evident in the Science Library. The current situation is unsatisfactory, as the students of the Science Library are constantly being disturbed by the activities of other groups on campus. A plan has been proposed by the Student Senate to establish a religious center in the Science Library, which would be open to all students who wish to participate in religious activities. The proposed center would include a chapel for religious services, a student center for religious discussions, and a library for religious literature. The center would be open to all students, regardless of their religious affiliation. The proposed center would be located in the Science Library, which is centrally located on campus and easily accessible to all students.

The Libraries

The Hayden Library is the largest library on campus, and is located in the center of the campus. The Science Library is the second largest library on campus, and is located in the Science Center. The Humanities Library is the third largest library on campus, and is located in the Human Sciences Building. The Business Library is the fourth largest library on campus, and is located in the Business Center. Each library has its own unique features, and is designed to meet the needs of the students who use it. The Hayden Library is the busiest library on campus, and is open twenty-four hours a day. The Science Library is the best library for research, and is equipped with the latest computer and laboratory equipment. The Humanities Library is the best library for the arts, and is equipped with a large collection of music, art, and theater materials. The Business Library is the best library for business, and is equipped with a large collection of business, economics, and finance materials.

Letters:

To the Editor:

The March 29, 1961 issue of The Tech carried an article which purported to present an analysis of the operation of the "Humanities Activity Organization". I would like to point out a number of errors in this article. There is no such organization on campus, and the article is based on a misunderstanding of the activities of the various religious groups on campus. The article is not a true reflection of the activities of any religious group on campus, and I would like to correct these errors.

Mr. Gladsheider obviously has never been involved in any religious activity on campus. I have been involved in the work of the Religious Activist Committee for three years, and I can assure you that the activities of the religious groups on campus are far more varied and complex than the article suggests. I would like to point out that the article is based on a misunderstanding of the activities of the various religious groups on campus, and I would like to correct these errors.

The original plans for the library included a plans on the first floor. These plans were expanded to include plans on the second floor. The new plans were designed to provide more space for the library, and to improve the circulation of the library. The new plans also included plans for the installation of new lighting fixtures, and for the installation of new air conditioning systems. The new plans were designed to improve the overall efficiency of the library, and to provide a more comfortable environment for the students and faculty who use the library.

During the construction of the new library, the library staff worked closely with the architects and engineers to ensure that the new plans were carried out as planned. The new library was completed on schedule, and the new plans were carried out as planned. The new library is now in use, and is providing a much better service to the students and faculty who use the library.
