Yes, it happened at last. Victory has finally come to Tournament Park. The Beavers of Caltech have come through with their first football victory in two seasons, as they whipped Southern California College of Los Angeles, 28-8.

Not Rusters Cooked Off

The California Techmen could not take victory lying down. The situation obviously called for a riotous celebration—so they started a bonfire and had a riot. To quote the "Busters" column in The California Tech: "Over-joyous Techmen seeking new methods of diversion, occupied themselves with a post-game aspian roast. Ever-vigilant Pasadena authorities summoned by West Covina police, hurriedly rushed to the scene—6 minutes and 9 seconds later. Seemingly disturbed at having been taken from their card games, Flame Fighters immediately defined all spectators as Class A foes, and proceeded to extinguish them."

Caltech's opponent, after Southern California College, is University of California, Riverside campus. The Beavers' chances for victory seem rather high, 1936 so far this season has dropped the rusters. The Beavers can win a third straight game.

Ransom: Bananas and Blood

The Mc Gill Daily has reported that a vicious gorilla is loose on its campus. Being a normal King Kong-type gorilla, one of its first acts was to kidnap a McGill coed. He later chased a heretofore normal McGill coed. He then delivered a note demanding ransom for the return of the coed.

The ransom demanded by the gorilla was a bushel of bananas and 3,000 pints of blood. King Kong was really blood-thirsty that day, but it was for a good cause—the blood drive. Unfortunately, however, the McGill students did not meet the ransom, and the coed escaped briefly to announce that she would never leave the gorilla. -
