Muni, Wayne Star

'Last Angry Man' At LSC

"The Last Angry Man," a moving drama of a doctor's life, will be shown at the Lecture Series Committee's entertainment film series this week. The film stars Paul Muni, David Wayne, Betsy Palmer, Luther Adler, and Joanna Moore, and is possibly the best drama of this term's series.

Dr. Samuel Akselman (Paul Muni) has been slogging away for forty-five years as a family doctor to poor families and hoodlums in Bensonhurst Brooklyn. A chance newspaper item about Muni's late night treatment of a badly beaten girl attracts the attention of David Wayne, a harried TV executive looking for a subject for a series to be sponsored by a big drug company. Muni at first refuses to be glorified on TV, but is finally persuaded by his lifelong friend (Luther Adler), and Wayne sets up plans for a live show from the doctor's house. Complications arise a short time before the show goes on the air, when the doctor is called to attend a young Negro who is involved with the police.

The film will be shown in room 10-250 Saturday night at 8:30, 10:30, and 11:45.
