College World

The fetes of Caltech seem never to end. A few weeks ago, Caltech broke ground for a new auditorium by titrating lemonade. Last June, three Caltech students climbed an unnamed mountain at the headwaters of the Kern River in Sequoia National Park. There was the third recorded ascent in history, the others being in 1929 and 1939. After returning, the climbers contacted appropriate offices in the Department of the Interior in Washington.

The final result is that a new unnamed mountain in Sequoia National Park now bears the name "Caltech Peak." From the 8,932-foot summit of the Peak is a reportedly exciting view of a large part of the Sierras, including Mt. Sequoia, Mt. Williamson, and Mt. Whitney. In the process, Caltech has become probably the only college in the world to be immortalized by a mountain.

Less than two months away is April 15, income tax deadline. University of British Columbia's Loyalty has come up with some valuable information for its students. This year, for the first time, full-time students may deduct their entire tuition bill from their income. However, if this income is less than $546, there will be no tax. All that is required is a UBC tuition receipt. If UBC had an elective, then its students would be able to earn $250 (or $265) a year before having to pay taxes.

MIT's tuition is not the only tuition going up in September. Less than two weeks ago, the president of Rensselaer announced that, as of September, tuition would be $150. This is a $100 increase over this year. At least we get a year's warning.

AFO is currently in the process of gathering information for the supplement to its student telephone directory. Recently, the Minnesota Daily (University of Minnesota) printed an editorial about telephone directories:

"One Minor Point"

"We would like to make one minor objection to the new directory. It doesn't list the telephone numbers of the editorial office about telephone directories.

"The best of the better.

Career Cues:

"Whatever your major, make sure to include a course in 'people'!"

W. Emron Roosevelt, President National State Bank, Elizabeth, N.J.

"If my college adviser had prophesied that studying psychology would some day help promote my career in banking, I'd have scoffed. Yet that is exactly what has happened. And when I think about it now the reason seems obvious. The facts and figures of banking, or of any other field, are mechanical devices. They take on real meaning only when related to people."

"Good psychology is also the basis of all teamwork. And, since most of today's business and scientific problems are too complicated for 'one-man' solutions, teamwork is essential. If you want to be a valuable team player and a likely candidate for captain, be the person who understands people. Learn what it takes for people to work together in harmony. Learn how to win trust and confidence. Learn basic human psychology."

"Bear this in mind, too. World tension, community tensions, business tension, even family tension are all facets of everyday life. The more you know of human behavior, the better prepared you will be to deal with them."

"So, if you have the chance, take a course devoted to 'people!' Your class adviser can probably help you fit a psychology elective into your schedule. I don't think you'll regret it... I know I didn't."
