HOW TO BE A BWOC

Ladies, let me be frank. The days of the college year dwindle down to a precious few. And some of you—let's face it—have not yet become BWOC’s. Yes, I know, you’ve been busy what wills going to class and walking your leash, but really, ladies, becoming a BWOC is so easy if you’ll only follow a few simple rules.

The first and most basic step on the road to being a BWOC is to at least notice. Get yourself noticed. But be very, very careful not to do it the wrong way. I mean, any old girl is bound to be noticed if she can stand a platform of her own height, with a towering coiffure, and a fresh rubber band around her pony tail. Her date comes calling, the BWOC is the very picture of chic fem-allegory. She has gone the whole hog in achieving little boyhood.

Once you have been noticed, it is no longer necessary to carry the plackard. It will suffice if, from time to time, you make a distinctive noise. If, for instance, every three or four minutes you say, “Whippoorwill!” you cannot but stay fresh in the minds of locker-sitters.

Come now to clothes, a vital accessory to the BWOC—indeed, to any girl who wishes to remain out of jail. But to the BWOC clothes are more than just a decent cover; they are more, indeed, to any girl who wishes to remain out of jail. But to the BWOC clothes are more than just a decent cover; they are, if you may use a slang word, a whole new dimension of tone and dignity.

This spring the “little boy look” is all the rage on campus. Every coed, in a mad effort to look like a little boy, is wearing short skirts, knee socks, and bobby-hair. But the BWOC is doing more. She has gone the whole hog in achieving little boyhood. She has fringed her pockets, sewn on her knees, down her upper lip, and is followed everywhere by a dog named Spot.

All this, of course, is only by day. When evening falls and the date comes calling, the BWOC is the very picture of chic femininity. She dresses in seven, simple basic black, relieved only by a fourteen pound charm bracelet. Her hands are usually covered, with a fresh rubber band around the nooky tail. Her

Grad Nips Fiji In Hockey

Graduate House, last year’s defending intramural hockey champions, are well on their way to another unbeaten season this year. Grad House again repelled the surprisingly strong Phi Gamma Delta squad 3-2 last Saturday.

Both teams scored once in the first period, and the Fiji’s took a 2-1 lead by the end of the second period. But the graduate’s came back with two in the final stanza to give the Fiji’s their third straight loss. The game was marked by nine penalties, with Phi Gamma Delta’s offense, high number for intramural play.

Earlier in the week, Grad House routed Theta Delta Chi 5-1, while Phi Gamma Delta downed Sigma Alpha Epsilon 4-0. The Fiji’s appear to be a second-place position this year.

The remainder of the teams will finish it anybody’s guess. NKSSA, who lost to Delta Psi in the opening round, is doing well in the consolation bracket, and may return to face the top teams. Tonight they play Lambda Chi Alpha.

Delta Psi, after losing to Grad House, rebounded to take Lambda Chi 3-1 and then nip Sigma Alpha Epsilon 3-4 in overtime on Sunday. Last night Theta Chi and Theta Delta Chi clashed in a key contest; the winner of that game faces Delta Psi tonight.

Later in the week, one team emerging from the bracketed double-elimination tournament will take on Phi Gamma Delta that winner will challenge Grad House for the championship next Sunday at 6:15. If necessary, a second game will be played on Tuesday, Feb. 27.

Team Spirit Is Key To Cagers’ Success

By Jack Barry

With this issue, The Tech begins a new series of articles written by the coaches of MIT’s athletic squad. The first of these is by Jack Barry, Varsity Basketball Coach. Following up this article, preliminaries and scouting report on the MIT basketball team’s last regular season game and will be part of the next installment.

The MIT basketball team is now enjoying what could possibly be its most successful season of all time. Last year’s squad, with an 11-8 record, was also a very fine team.

There are several elements that have contributed to this unusual situation in MIT basketball. If one were to designate one of them as the most important, it would have to be the outstanding team spirit.

The first team of three years ago was shown to be in a very strong potential despite their 4-7 record. On this squad were seven men who were to continue to perform with outstanding spirit and loyalty throughout their college years: Dave Koch, Tom Burns, George Wyman, Bill Bloebaum, Chuck Gamble, Terry Bray.

The 1959-60 team was the victim of a number of misfortunes involving injury, illness, and inexperience. High marks for the season, the MIT basketball team has already surpassed that year’s win total of 11 games.

The scoring of Dave Koch has developed into a fine playmaker and strong scorer. Tom Burns has a fine season last year, but he never showed promise of having an even better season. Before he was lost through illness.

Steve Smith has been a steady relief man, while Bill Bloebaum, George Wyman, and Chuck Gamble have made equally important contributions not only in games but also during practice.

Speaking for the entire coaching staff, I believe that MIT has a great team this year and that these men are gone. They have shown in practice the ability to make good basketball players.
