On Objectiveist Ethics

Ayn Rand Speaks Tonight; Kresge Program At 8 P.M.

The Objectivist Ethics, will be the title of the lecture by Ayn Rand, American novelist and philosopher, tonight at 8 in Kresge.

Miss Rand is well known for her best selling novels The Fountainhead and Atlas Shrugged. Her other works include, Anthem, We the Living and For the New Intellectual. She has long been an outspoken proponent of individualism and the need for collectivism of any sort. Her views on money, language and intelligibility have aroused strong controversy in recent years. Ayn Rand has been working to codify her philosophy of objeclivism which is sponsored by the Lecture Series Committee, will be a part of this total philosophy in which she will attempt to demonstrate how the Objectivist's viewpoint leads to the total scheme of things.

The Lecture Series, sponsored by the Lectures Series Committee, will be about a part of the activities council upon which Bowman served. "I am happy that the student body wants me to be their next UAP and has expressed support for my platform. It was intended to be realistic and I feel we have been able to achieve it. I would like to thank those who supported me. I will continue my campaign for the second election."

The newspaper distributor freely admitted the incident and said, "I really felt that I had done the correct thing. I thought that Miss Staton identified before the committee. She said I had several bills to the student and had called on him personally at least twice without success."

The last time the newspaper distributor called, the student refused to speak to him and called him an offensive name. The newspaper distributor then filed the student and rented him to the floor in the hall of his dormitory. His purpose was to frighten him into paying the debt. The student was not injured.

The matter first came to the attention of Judcomm near the end of last term, when the student sent a letter to the committee. The other student retracted his story and the debt was paid. The committee then called him in to explain his statement.

The debt has not been paid, however, and the student who made the complaint did not return to MIT for the second term.

Bowman Pledges Realistic Action

Upon winning the election, Henry Bowman issued the following statement: "I am happy that the student body wants me to be their next UAP and has expressed support for my platform. It was intended to be realistic and I feel we have been able to achieve it."
