The choice of the BU Field area is part of a program to balance the residential areas both east and west of the university's main campus, Greater Boston and the Charles River Basin. The new dormitories are scheduled for completion by the summer of 1963.

"This is one of the most extensive and unusual housing developments ever conceived for college students in New England," said BU's President Harold C. Cas. "It will be a living center with each dormitory floor infusing the spirit and atmosphere of a small dormitory but also there will be preserved the outside and vibrant environment possible only in a larger dormitory." Visible from the upper floors of the new dorms will be the BU Campus, Chestnut Hill and the Charles River Basin. The basilica, the Mystic River Bridge, and Chestnut Hill with the Boston College Campus.

The choice of the BU Field area as the location for the new dorms is part of a program to balance residential areas both east and west of the university's main buildings (i.e., the new dorm vs. Shelton, Charlesgate, and the Towers).
