Comedy; Characterization in 'Divorce'...

By Charles Foster Ford

The tradition of the violent passions of Southern Italy, complete with unspoken words and a surprising sense of personal honor, is the background for the funny film at the Park Square Cinema.

If Ferdinando is loved by his overseers, Rossalda cannot divorce her.

In Italy divorce is illegal, but he might have had a legal case had he not escaped with a light sentence.

Ferdinando's love for the very old girl with too much snake in her is a strong bond, but the entire film is almost entirely about the old girl's want of smoke. It is a strongly humorous movie that makes Mussolini a warm-hearted man.
