Charles Floods Predicted
By David Vanderfoot
The Boston Public Works department will sandbag the banks of the Charles River to prevent flooding, if the need arises, Commissioner James Haley said Sunday.
His statement followed the announcement that the river is expected to crest 21 feet above floor level on Thursday. This statement, attributed by United Press International to the US Weather Bureau, was later qualified by the bureau. The flooding, they said, will occur only at Needham on Thursday morning, and at points up to Watertown later in the day.
The Metropolitan District Commission, said that the level of the river in the lower division has been steadily decreasing from the high point of this storm 100 feet, 8 inches, which occurred Saturday. This is 4 inches below flood level, they said. The commissioner, in an effort to lower the river below the danger point, has been dumping water through flood gates on the lower Charles. By Sunday the Charles had subsided somewhat, but flooding had forced the MTA to close its underground operations at Kenmore Station on Monday.

IM Tennis Tourney Slowed by Rain
Rain again slowed the intramural tennis tournament, as only two matches could be played off this week. All scheduled matches will again be pushed forward a week unless teams are otherwise notified.
