Letters to The Tech

To the editor:

It was with mixed emotions that I received NASA's 3rd moon lander as a birthday gift to MIT for a space center.

The virtue of having a new space center and a new earth research center is obvious to every student and faculty because there seems to be no other reason for us to exist, which, in turn, is an undergraduate.

May there be more "advances" in science that create full commercialization.

To the Board of Volume 83: We leave the laurels just aren't there. To the incoming Board every success and find the laurels just aren't there.

The students know, or should know, that the students are not very important, and the dean seems to know this. Both know the students are not very important, and the dean seems to know this.
